

World
in Brief

Chrysler Showing
Record Earnings

DETROIT (UPI) — Chrysler Corp. still has a quarter to go, but with a record $76.2 million in third quarter profits, the automaker already has earned more in the first nine months of 1976 than in any full year in its 51-year history.

The financial report Monday was all the more remarkable as it followed the deepest red ink performance ever in the auto industry. In a six-quarter period, stretching over the last half of 1974 and all of 1975, Chrysler lost $339 million.

In its best year ever, Chrysler earned $303 million — a figure now topped by the $303.4 million the automaker has chalked up so far this year.

..While Ford
Hurt by Strike

DETROIT (UPI) — Ford Motor Co., suffering the lingering effects of a 28-day strike, saw auto sales plunge below year-ago levels for the first time in more than 12 months.

Ford Monday reported its sales for Oct. 11-20 were down 32 per cent from a year ago. Industrywide, deliveries were 3 per cent below a year ago. It was the first time since the last 10-day period in September, 1975, that sales haven't exceeded year-ago levels. The industry previously had recorded 37 straight 10-day sales periods in which sales topped year-ago levels.

General Motors topped year-ago sales by less than 8 per cent.

British PM Firm
Despite Pound Drop

LONDON (UPI) — Prime Minister James Callaghan said Monday the British pound is undervalued and that the government will stand by its policies despite sterling's fall to a new low.

Callaghan warned the International Monetary Fund in a television interview that the IMF and the world's richer countries will have to take the "political consequences" if they force Britain to take harmful economic measures.

Chancellor of the Exchequer Denis Healey earlier had denied in Parliament a newspaper report that the IMF and U.S. Treasury had decided the pound should drop to $1.50 as a condition for the IMF's pending $3.9 billion loan to Britain.

The story, despite denials in London and Washington, had sent the pound to an all-time low of $1.5730 before it rallied to close at $1.5950.

Well-Rested Carter
Returns to Hustings

PLAINS, Ga. (UPI) — Refreshed by two days off the campaign trail, Jimmy Carter headed for South Carolina and Illinois, both closely contested states, on the first leg of his final campaign swing today.

Carter has kept a low profile since Saturday, spending most of his time making television spots, relaxing and getting ready for his last week on the trail before he returns to his hometown to vote a week from today.

His strategists indicate he is coasting, confident of the outcome of the election, and trying to avoid any political mistakes on the home stretch.

Moscow Meeting
Has Rebuke, Boast

MOSCOW (UPI) — The boast of a near-record harvest and a rebuke of the United States for permitting the presidential race cool Soviet-American relations were the keynotes Monday at the opening of a week of crucial meetings by Kremlin leaders.

But Communist party General Secretary Leonid Brezhnev, speaking at a closed session of the 287-member party Central Committee, said the Kremlin will continue to work for better ties with Washington regardless of whether President Ford or Jimmy Carter wins the election.

Nods to Ellenville, Marlboro, Woodstock

EDC Pushes Four Local Work Plans

By CHAZY DOWALIBY
Freeman Staff

KINGSTON — The county's economic planning committee has given a special boost to four public works projects that will be a part of the scramble for $3 million in federal funds expected to reach the state within the next month.

The Overall Economic Development Committee voted to endorse proposals from Ellenville, Marlboro, Woodstock and Ulster county at a review meeting Monday night.

The local nod will give these projects extra points with the federal Economic Development Administration (EDA) when it decides who gets what grant money in New York state.

This is the first day EDA is accepting grant proposals for money under a recently passed $3 billion federal works program designed to bring fast, short term construction projects into localities.

"It was the feeling of the committee that the projects endorsed, while providing necessary short term employment opportunities for the hard pressed construction trades would also lend themselves to long term employment opportunities for county residents," said Richard Matthews, committee chairman.

The four projects given special emphasis are water expansion projects in Ellenville and Marlboro, sidewalk and curbing improvements in the town of Woodstock and the construction of an Ulster county public works administration building.

The Ellenville project, which will cost $949,966, is of special interest to the committee. If it is approved, local resort owners in that area have indicated that they will begin construction of expanded facilities, including a convention center, which would mean several hundred permanent jobs in that village and surrounding towns.

The bill on the Marlboro water proposal is $977,175. Woodstock's sidewalks will cost $218,722. And the county wants to build the public administration facility at a cost of $585,250.

Also considered by the committee last night were five other proposals also to be sent to EDA in Philadelphia— but without special comment.

They are requests for a maintenance building and garages at the Saugerties Central School district; Gardiner town hall; a sewer project in New Paltz; expansion of the Rosendale town barn and a bath house addition to the Rosendale recreation center.

Those combined projects will cost $916,929.

The local committee has also received 25 other letters of intent from towns, villages and the county, indicating their interest in participating in the federal grant program.

Matthews emphasized that the committee will consider all applications and urged local officials to submit their plans before OEDP's next scheduled meeting, Monday, Nov. 1.

"We've set that deadline because the federal government will only be accepting proposals for a period of 30 days, beginning today," said Matthews. "If we can get these things early it will allow time for EDA to review the applications and send them back for correction and additional information, if necessary."

OED will not submit every local proposal brought in by the towns, but each town and village also has the option of filing for a grant on its own.

—GRIM DAY IN THE PUMPKIN PATCH—

The children of the Port Ewen Nursery School got a chance to pick pumpkins in Ferrante's pumpkin patch on the Wallkill flats across the river from New Paltz Monday. The weather was wet, foggy and raw, and today's winds and tonight's predicted lows in the 20s are not much of an improvement.

Olivebridge Site Chosen for Youth Residence

'Family' Finds Its Home

By TOBIE GEERTSEMA
Freeman Staff

WOODSTOCK — After searching almost a year for a suitable location, the service organization called Family has finally found a site in Olive for its proposed home for juvenile "runaways and throwaways."

The controversial short-term residence for 13-to-17-year-old boys and girls had been considered an unwelcome addition to Woodstock by many town officials and some residents, and Family had encountered problems in finding housing in the art colony.

Authorization for the alternate site in Olive was confirmed today by Eleanor Billmyer of the Albany offices of the New York State Board of Social Welfare. She said the runaway residence would be operated in the Barbara Black House, Beaverkill Road, but that final approval was contingent upon Family's bringing the building into compliance with the rules of the state board.

Ms. Black has been very active in the affairs of Family, an information-referrals-crisis intervention service which has been functioning in Woodstock for six years. Her house in Olive is a large, two-story, wood frame building that has been on the market for some time.

The house has not yet met the architectural requirements of the Board of Social Welfare, and Ms. Billmyer said no operating certificate has been issued.

She expected Family to receive the certificate, however, once current renovations are completed to add a second bathroom, a second exit, a smoke detector system, and other requirements for a group home with a maximum capacity of 12 youngsters.

Family sees the proposed home as a logical extension of the "difficult problems involving runaways" with which it has been dealing since it began offering help and information locally. Supporting the need for the project, the organization said that 60 of the 84 young people it served during 1975 needed temporary housing. Those figures were the basis of the agency's application for a grant for the home from the U.S. Department of

Hinchey to PSC: No Rate Hikes

By CHAZY DOWALIBY
Freeman Staff

KINGSTON — Assemblyman Maurice Hinchey, D-101st, has filed a 26-page brief with the state Public Service Commission opposing Central Hudson's request for a rate increase.

The document, submitted just under the deadline wire, was filed in the names of three of the nine designated intervenors in the hearings — Hinchey, Hyman Ruchlis and Louis Fagon.

It challenges Central Hudson's allegations that the demand for electricity has increased at a rate that necessitates the construction of additional power generating facilities.

"We contend that the facilities the company now has generate an extra capacity of 87 per cent," Hinchey said. "The brief charges the company with several miscalculations with regard to growth rate and the actual declines that have taken place over the past three years since the oil embargo."

Also challenged is the company's forecast of a 1300 per cent increase in the use of electric heating by commercial establishments in the next ten years as well as the assumption that 75 per cent of new homes will be installing electric heat by 1995.

The PSC has been holding extensive hearings into the rate-increase request, with Hinchey taking a front line stand against the utility.

In the brief submitted this week the intervenors charge Central Hudson with essentially ignoring long term trends toward lower rates of growth, reflecting the depressant effects on the hard-hit local economy of reduced incomes in the area, as well as the effects of energy

EDITORIAL Public in The Dark

County officials have refused to let The Freeman see copies of next year's tentative spending proposals, which were submitted by county department heads last week to the legislature's finance committee.

Apparently they think the public is better off in the dark as deliberations proceed on the spending of our money.

They won't let the taxpayers know anything until Nov. 15, the last legal date for letting the taxpayers in on the revised budget to be approved by the finance committee.

At that point county citizens will have only a short time to look at the massive and confusing budget before it's adopted by the whole legislature in early December.

Trying to make much sense of county spending while taxpayers still have a chanceto comment will be an almost hopeless task at that point if the county succeeds in keeping the curtain drawn over the discussions and dealings that went into it.

Is that what the administration wants? During the tenure of Legislature Chairman Peter Savago spending has more than tripled to this year's $55 million and still the county is saying it can't — or won't — pay its bills.

New Paltz has a new Olympic swimming pool and legislators have a new $75,000 parking lot but the sick and elderly in Ellenville can't get medicine.

Now Savago has egged his fellow legislators into an expensive court battle over the welfare deficit which they know they can't win.

Yet the public once again is supposed to sit dumbly by and wait to get its tax bills without a chance to see where its money is going beforehand.

What's the administration afraid we'll find?

Mayor Promises to 'Hold Line'

No-Budge Budget Is Koenig Pledge

By SID LEAVITT
Freeman Staff

KINGSTON — The city's 1977 budget will "hold the line" with no new municipal programs, a pledge which Mayor Francis R. Koenig says he will adhere to more adamantly than ever in the face of a $400,000 loss in sales tax revenue.

The first 1977 budget requests from city department heads began coming into the mayor's office Monday, and preliminary indications are that departments indeed are holding the line, Koenig told the Freeman today.

"I think they're hanging in there," said Koenig, who will begin scheduling budget conferences with department heads in a few weeks as election campaigning quiets down.

"I've told all departments that there will be no new programs for 1977 and that we're going to be cutting back," Koenig said.

He said he even issued a directive in September to cut back on 1976 expenditures as the current budget comes to an end so that the city can be on the best possible financial footing for an austerity year in 1977.

The mayor's 1976 general budget of $8.8 million was 9.1 per cent higher than the previous year, with a local tax request that netted out at $4.3 million, a 19.5 per cent increase over 1975 — not counting a loss of nearly 1 per cent in total assessed valuations, the available pool of taxable property.

The loss in total valuation, about $2.9 million, was almost all attributed to certiorari proceedings on assessment grievances, notably those involving the Hudson Cement Co. plant and Kingston Plaza properties.

The 1977 wrench in the financial works will be the loss in sales tax revenue as a result of the county legislature's decision to preempt 0.5 per cent of Kingston's 7 per cent sales tax.

"That alone means $10 per thousand on our tax rate," Koenig said.

The 1976 municipal tax rate is $97.73 per $1,000 assessed valuation, and school taxes are close to that figure again, leaving city taxpayers with a total tax levy of some $190 per thousand.

Of the municipal rate, about two-thirds or $63.19 per thousand goes to city government, and the remaining one-third, $34.54, goes to the county.

Koenig, completing the first year of his fourth two-year term, faces pitfalls in other revenue areas as he prepares his budget proposal for the Kingston Common Council for Jan. 1.

Board Seeks Earlier Curfew for Paltz Bars

By ROB BORSELLINO
Freeman Staff

NEW PALTZ — A request to rescind the 4 A.M. curfew for bars here has been sent by the Village Board to the County Legislature in the aftermath of the October 16th riot.

At their regular monthly meeting Monday night, the board suggested replacing the present curfew with a 2 a.m. closing time for bars as a deterrent to future civil disorders. Deputy Mayor George Ackert noted that attempts to have the State Liquor Authority take some action have been unsuccessful. Board members generally agreed that bar owners in the village should take some responsibility for keeping order.

In a related action, Mayor John Vett formally announced the formation of a committee to study the causes of the October 16 disorder. The nine-member panel will consist of three members appointed by the village board, three appointed by the town board and three members from the college community, to be appointed by the village and town boards jointly. It is expected that the committee will make its recommendations based on the police commissioner's report currently being compiled.

The board announced that a proposed law which would grant businesses a partial tax exemption for expansion will be the subject of a public hearing on

Cops Kill 4 Escaped Lions, Hunt Others

RINGGOLD, Ga. (UPI) — Police shot and killed four African lions that escaped from a private zoo Monday night, wounded and captured a fifth and today hunted two others roaming the north Georgia mountains.

The seven lions escaped when culprits pried open their cage doors, authorities said. The large cats attacked and killed four dogs, a wolf and a cow before Catoosa County sheriff's officers arrived at the 40-acre preserve near the Georgia-Tennessee border with rifles and shotguns.

Officers killed four of the lions and wounded a fifth and returned it to its cage. But two female lions, weighing 400 pounds each, escaped into wooded areas which dot the mountainous cattle region. A posse of 12 deputies resumed the hunt for them at first light.

Authorities warned residents of Catoosa, Hamilton and Whitfield counties to stay indoors until the lions are found.

"Someone had let the lions loose. They had pried the cage door open with a crowbar," said their owner, Mrs. Linda Keown.

The lions, valued at about $3,000 total, were described as "vicious" by Mrs.

Regis Can't Vote, Can Run

SAN LUIS OBISPO, Calif. (UPI) — Regis J.J.A. Goldbach is one of 23 write-in presidential candidates in California, but he can't vote for himself.

Goldbach, 65, is serving a life term for murder. Goldbach, an inmate of the California Men's Colony housed in a unit for psychotic prisoners, filed an affidavit and was certified last week by California Secretary of State March Fong Eu.

He listed himself as an "inmate jail lawyer" and gave his business address as "CMC San Luis Obispo, Calif." "No one in this office recognized the address as a prison," a spokeswoman in Mrs. Eu's office said Monday. However, since there appeared to be no fraudulent statements on the affidavit, she said, he is a viable write-in candidate. "As a convicted felon in prison he cannot vote under state law," the spokeswoman added. "On the other hand, if elected, presumably he would have the power to pardon himself."

Italian Witches Bomb Boutique

MILAN, Italy (UPI) — A mysterious women's group identifying itself as "Witches outside, Witches inside" has claimed responsibility for the bombing of an exclusive dress shop.

Police said a homemade bomb exploded late Sunday against the window of a Luisa Spagnoli boutique, an expensive chain with branches throughout Italy, but caused no injuries.

An anonymous telephone caller directed police to a message signed "Witches outside, witches inside, we are all in the movement."

The group said it attacked Luisa Spagnoli because the chain exploits prisoners to "dress women of the upper middle class with outfits costing $180 and sweaters costing $24."

Has Sex Spoiled College Boards?

NEW YORK (UPI) — Don't worry about a decline in college entrance test scores — they're not worth much anyway, a top educator said today.

And besides, students are too busy with other things — such as sex — to study.

"As measures of many important attributes of personality and character and talent, the tests aren't worth a hoot — and never were intended to be," Dr. Harold Howe II told the College Entrance Examination Board today.

Howe and other top educators were appointed a year ago to look into the decline, which has been steady over the last decade.

Some experts interviewed by the panel blamed the widespread use of birth control pills by teen-agers, which makes sex a competitor of academic studies.

Others blamed television or bad diets, which can effect brain development. One expert traced the drop in scores to the decline of enrollment in Latin in high schools.

"Compared to the symptoms

we have experienced in the divorce rate, the crime rate, and the rate of inflation over the past 30 years, the change of about 10 per cent in test scores could be seen as a light case of flu," said Howe.

College Board examinations measure verbal and mathematical aptitudes and figure heavily on getting the high school student into the college of his choice.

Scores range from 200 to 800, and the most demanding schools select students from among high scorers — the 700 to 800 set.

Since 1967, average verbal scores have gone from 466 to 431 and math marks, from 492 to 472.

Howe is vice president for education research at the Ford Foundation and a former U.S. Commissioner of Education.

Howe said the decline in no way justifies "a frantic wringing of hands about the decline of American youth, American schools, American society or the utility of the tests."

Howe said hasty measures to reverse the test score decline could do more harm than good.

Welfare Savings Could = $110 Mill

ALBANY, N.Y. (UPI) — Within the next few weeks, the Carey administration plans to unveil proposed welfare economies which would save "a minimum of $110 million" on both the local and state government levels.

The list will include most of the program changes submitted by Gov. Hugh Carey last winter and rejected by the legislature, a statement issued by the governor's office indicated.

State Social Services Commissioner Philip Toia said following a two-hour meeting Monday with representatives of the counties that the administration had accepted as its goal adoption of "program changes" that would keep the outlay for welfare next year for both the state and for localities at current year levels.

"That would be a minimum of $110 million, plus any added inflation costs," Toia said, adding, "What we are considering doesn't deal with a lid or a freeze" on the localities' share of total welfare costs.

Toia declined to provide specifics of where the economies would occur. Those the legislature eliminated from Carey's proposed 1976-77 state budget last winter included the elimination of many optional Medicaid services not required by the federal government.

Carey met with the county officials for about 30 minutes. Afterward, Edwin Crawford of Broome County, president of the County Executives Association, said the meeting was "one of the most productive sessions we've had on this issue."

Carey "has accepted as a goal or objective that we try to freeze 1977-78 expenses at current levels," Crawford said.

Crawford and Toia indicated that the possibility of reducing basic welfare grants, such as a bill passed in the Senate prior to adjournment of the spring session would have done, was "a low priority item" on the list of economies being studied.

Toia said the legality and cost effect of some proposals had not yet been determined and indicated that the total package would be compiled "within a week or two."

Although the legislature would not be back in session until January to act on the proposed changes, Carey's statement indicated the proposals would be made public in advance of the session because they would be "crucial to the budgets of both the state and the localities."

"Every program that our department runs is being reviewed," Toia said. "This is an across-the-board department review."

"Several other departments ... would be impacted by what we are talking about," Toia said.

Others attending the meeting were John Klein, county executive of Suffolk County, William Murphy, county executive of Rensselaer County, and William Baker, representing the State Association of Counties.

Slick Waldorf Stick Up

NEW YORK (UPI) — Two men wearing wigs and false beards held up the Cartier jewelry shop in the lobby of the Waldorf-Astoria Monday and escaped with about $200,000 in cash and jewels.

Police said the pair, described as being in their thirties, entered the store about 3 p.m. and handcuffed a male and a female clerk to shelves in the back of the glass-windowed store.

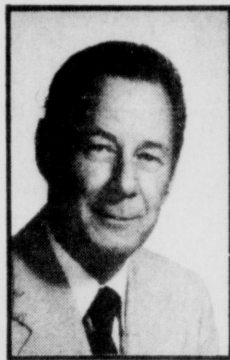

Police said the pair escaped from the shop with an estimated $150,000 in jewels and $50,000 in cash.

But, Carl Thomas, manager of the shop, said an inventory will have to be taken to determine what was taken and its worth.

Thomas told reporters crowded around the store, "We were robbed and hopefully we can put our trust in the New York City Police Department to find out who did it."

Asked if the operation was not a "slick one" to be carried off near the busy lobby, he snapped back, "These are slick times."

Airwaves Crackle with Ford-Carter Insults

Truck Drivers Stage CB Debate

HARRISBURG, Pa. (UPI) — The CB radio crackled, alive with the chatter of truckers passing through the state capital.

"If this is all of the independent truckers backing President Ford, then Jimmy Carter's gonna walk away with it Tuesday," someone said over his CB unit.

And that started the great Truckers Debate of 1976 Monday, which was not sponsored by the League of Women Voters and was carried over channel 19 on the CB instead of the television networks.

"Jimmy Carter takes a bath in the Susquehanna River," said one trucker.

"I'm gonna quit work and get one of his giveaway jobs. He can just shove it."

"All that guy has is a bunch of peanuts," said another trucker.

Then, a Democrat broke in.

"How can you guys talk about the Democrats that way when every time you get a Democrat you have some spending money and every time you get a Republican you have a recession," he said.

And that's about the way it went Monday as the Independent Truckers Association held a weak "President Ford" rally in Harrisburg.

They had promised a two-mile long caravan of screaming 18-wheelers. They brought eight big trucks and some cars.

It was hardly the mystical "convoy" in the song of the same name, which crosses the country scaring the daylight out of the "smokies." Still, as a "media event" it was interesting.

Reporters climbed all over the eight trucks as film crews tried to get dramatic shots of the big rigs whipping around corners and thundering up to the front steps of the capitol.

The ITA backs Ford because it says he supports legislation that would give independent truckers a competitive break against the big shipping companies and the railroads.

And they don't have much time for Carter at all.

"I want a president, not a preacher," said one of the signs on a big 18-wheeler.

"I'll stick with Ford. At least I know where he stands on the issues."

Another sign said Carter backs gun control, mandatory auto insurance, railroad financing from the federal Transportation Trust Fund and last, but not least, what some view as the most sinister plot of them all — increased fees for CB licenses.

The dozen or so truckers at the rally took it all seriously.

"Carter backs the railroads and Ford backs us truckers," said William Scheffer of Breezewood, the trucker known as "Nighttrain" who helped organize the rally.

Scheffer said the truckers also came to Harrisburg to criticize Gov. Milton J. Shapp, who was known as the "Truckin' Governor" during his ill-fated presidential bid because he helped settle a national truckers strike two years ago.

"Shapp sold us out," said Scheffer. "He rode on our coattails for president, then behind our backs he went out to get some 'star time' (trucker talk for TV publicity.)"

Shapp press secretary Michael McLaughlin watched the demonstration, then proclaimed it "an abject failure."

"What more can I say?" McLaughlin said. "It was full of sound and fury, but signified nothing."

Hope for Control Held Out

Vaccines May Guard against VD

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Venereal disease may be controlled one day by vaccines, a new government research report said today.

Gonorrhea may be traced by disease control experts through identification of particular strains of the disease-causing bacteria, similar to the way epidemic-causing strains of flu virus are tracked, it said.

Traditional methods of VD control — treatment with drugs and the tracing of an infected person's sexual contacts for treatment — haven't been completely effective, said the report on Sexually Transmitted Diseases.

Some VD organisms have become increasingly drug resistant. Like other infections, these diseases often are transmitted before symptoms occur and treatment is begun.

"Research today seems to hold the key to the control of sexually-transmitted diseases that antibiotics once promised," said the report from the National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases, one of the National Institutes of Health.

"New or improved diagnostic tests, better therapy, and perhaps even vaccines are potential rewards of medical research on diseases that have plagued mankind for hundreds, if not thousands, of years."

A vaccine may one day provide protection against gonorrhea, the most widespread sexual disease in this country, the report said.

Epidemiologists believe the 1 million reported gonorrhea infections in 1975 actually represent 2.7 million cases. Worldwide, 100 million cases are reported annually, and the number is rising.

Though commonly believed to include just gonorrhea and syphilis, VD represents a number of sexually-transmitted infections, some only recently considered to be venereal.

Among other diseases cited in the report are genital herpes, trichomoniasis, and non-gonococcal urethritis.

These five diseases afflict an estimated 8 to 10 million Americans annually. All have in common the fact that they are spread through very intimate, usually sexual, contact.

"Rarely, if ever, does it result from contact with inanimate objects such as toilet seats," the report said.

Volunteers Make United Way Work

By CARL GRAHAM
Freeman staff

United Way

The United Way of Ulster County, although it belongs to the United Way of America, is a home grown product.

"United Way of America furnishes no input," according to Executive Director Richard Fredenberg. "We write our own bylaws and elect our own directors."

Frendenberg, bookkeeper Rina Gering and clerk Florence Davis are the only paid workers. They are aided by a large volunteer staff and a 24-member board of directors from which members of the 17 participating agencies are barred.

United Way's best known function is its annual fund raising campaign, the annual refueling operation that sets the limits for all other programs.

The fund raising chairman is furnished on a rotating basis by IBM, Central Hudson, New York Telephone Company, Kingston City Schools Consolidated, the Kingston Banking Council, Ferroxcube, Rotron, Hercules and the area's colleges and hospitals.

"This year's associate chairman is next year's chairman," Fredenberg explained. "It gives us continuity."

Major corporations provide middle management executives each year to help with the fund drive and they are effective in providing in-plant solicitation, according to Fredenberg.

"The campaign is broken down into divisions, each with a manager," he explained. "Each manager recruits five captains, each captain recruits five solicitors, and so forth. Nobody gets a big job to do."

Any organization can join, but it must meet United Way standards. An admissions committee checks into its previous fund raising activities and determines the community need for its services, attempting to avoid duplication.

"Then—can we fund them?" Fredenberg said. "That has to be a major consideration."

The volunteer Planning and Coordinating Committee checks to see if the proposed services of the applicant are not being furnished already by some private or governmental agency. They also explore the possibility of combining the applicants service with some other agency to provide the service at lower cost to both.

The idea of a united campaign to do away with many individual campaigns has been around since 1887 and has been functioning locally since 1955. Previous Community Chest and Red Feather campaigns evolved into the present United Way, but the purpose is unchanged.

United Way receives about $55,000 yearly from the fund drive for its own expenses.

"That was 13.2 per cent of the total cost last year," he noted. The figure compares favorably with overhead of most major individual campaigns, some of which take more than half the money received for their own expenses.

Copies of the United Way annual report are available for inspection at all times in the Governor Clinton office or from the New York State Board of Social Welfare.

Frendenberg came to his job after being named merchandising manager of the new Sears store in Kingston Plaza. He had previous solicitation experience for the March of Dimes in Monroe County and in his native Pennsylvania.

"Rather than be transferred out of Kingston I decided to stay," he said.

Center To Report Voting

KINGSTON — Election returns for the county will again be reported from the Central Tabulation Center (CTC) in the county office building beginning at 9 p.m. on election day, Tuesday, Nov. 2.

Board of Elections Commissioners Edward Callahan and Jack Hogan have announced that the CTC co-ordinator for both public and press operations will be Al Cawein, public relations director, Allan E. Coles, director of data processing and Al Jaffer, data processing systems designer.

The elections board staff, a number of county department heads and various other volunteer employees will be receiving election returns by phone from inspectors in the county's 150 districts.

The public will be allowed to view instant tabulations on six viewing terminals in the lobby of the building.

Press headquarters will be in the county clerk's office.

All returns reported election night will be unofficial. The official returns will be available the next day.

Kingston District Seeks Better Idea

KINGSTON — The chairman of the Kingston Board of Education's building committee said today that he is currently in the process of interviewing architects to "seek a more feasible way of dealing with the Kingston High School problem."

Joseph Feraca Jr., says he expects to have a recommendation when the board meets on November 4th, but he would offer no further comment until that time.

At their regular meeting this month, and again at a special meeting two weeks ago, the board was unable to agree on a resolution that would have separated the high school renovation work from the district.

In addition to Feraca, board members Len Cane and Josephine McKean also serve on the building committee.

Hurley Taxes Headed Down

HURLEY — The Town of Hurley anticipates a cut in town taxes for 1977.

Supervisor Raymond "Jake" Croswell said at Monday night's town board meeting that preliminary figures call for $71,285 to be raised by taxes, a drop of $1.04 per thousand of assessed valuation from this year's $8.51, which was based on tax assessments of $76,541.

Highway department taxes will be $247,007 with a rate of $25.87, up slightly from this year's $241,701 and $25.84. The combined result will be a drop of $1.01 per thousand.

New figures for the various special districts show the Hurley Fire District rate at $5.12 per thousand, up 18 cents; the West Hurley Fire District at $9.24, up $1.09; and the Rolling Meadows Lighting District at $3.33, down 24 cents.

The 1977 budget will be the subject of a public hearing at 7:30 p.m. Thursday, Nov. 4, in the West Hurley Elementary School.

Croswell said the reduced taxes for next year came about as a result of increased estimated revenues for next year and an anticipated surplus of $55,000 in this year's budget which will be applied to reduce next year's taxes.

"Our department heads are all within their budgets for this year," Croswell said. "They have done a splendid job of keeping expenses down."

Croswell said that Town Attorney Robert MacKinnon has drawn up a show cause order to be served on Dr. Gary Berchenko, directing him to show why he has not completed work on a farm pond on his Witch Tree Road property. The pond has been a subject of controversy for more than a year, with the town maintaining that is not a pond at all but a gravel mining operation.

Croswell said the board was keeping tabs on Berchenko to make sure he actually completes work on the pond.

The board denied a request for a change in the name of Mart Presser Road, noting that several persons who signed the petition for a change had later asked their names be taken off the petition. Board members felt it would be too much trouble to make all the changes in highway maps, applications for federal road funds, fire district maps, and other places where the change would be necessary.

The board denied a request from the Hurley League of Women Voters for revenue sharing funds to prepare a booklet on local government, saying it was a private organization and not entitled to such funds. For the same reason it denied a request from the Maverick Concerts group, which asked funds to help with a renovation of their property on Maverick Road.

The board commended Mrs. Dorothy Alling for her work as head of the committee that planned and carried out the Oct. 16 Bicentennial ceremonies in Hurley. Councilmen George Schroeder and Jack Rose will present her with a certificate.

In other action, the board:

- Set a special meeting for 8 p.m. Monday, Nov. 8, in the West Hurley Fire House, where bids will be opened for a new police car and a new truck for the highway department.

- Set a 9 p.m. curfew for children 17 and under for Saturday, Oct. 30, and Sunday, Oct. 31, Halloween celebrations. The curfew will be strictly enforced by town police.

- Awarded John Russell the landfill contract for 1977. Russell, who received $12,000 this year, will receive $14,900 next year. He was the only bidder.

Candidate: Castration For Rapist

SPRINGFIELD, Mo. (UPI) — Men convicted of committing "violent rapes" should be castrated, according to John Hoffman, Republican candidate for Missouri's 144th district state legislative seat.

"I don't think it would be any more cruel and inhumane than the act perpetrated on the lady," Hoffman said over the weekend. "The man is not affected mentally as the woman is affected mentally — which may take years of therapy to recover from this shame that has been inflicted upon her."

Hoffman told those who advocated rehabilitation that it "doesn't bring back a lady that has been killed, and it doesn't remove the stigma that she will have to bear for the rest of her life."

He admitted his proposal was "radical," but said, "the people think it's time to do something radical. Rape is a serious problem."

Hoffman also advocates disbarment and prison sentences for "any attorney defending an accused rapist who puts the victim on trial by humiliation, bringing up past sex life — if any — and treating the victim in a derogatory manner."

Esopus Meets on Garage Tonight

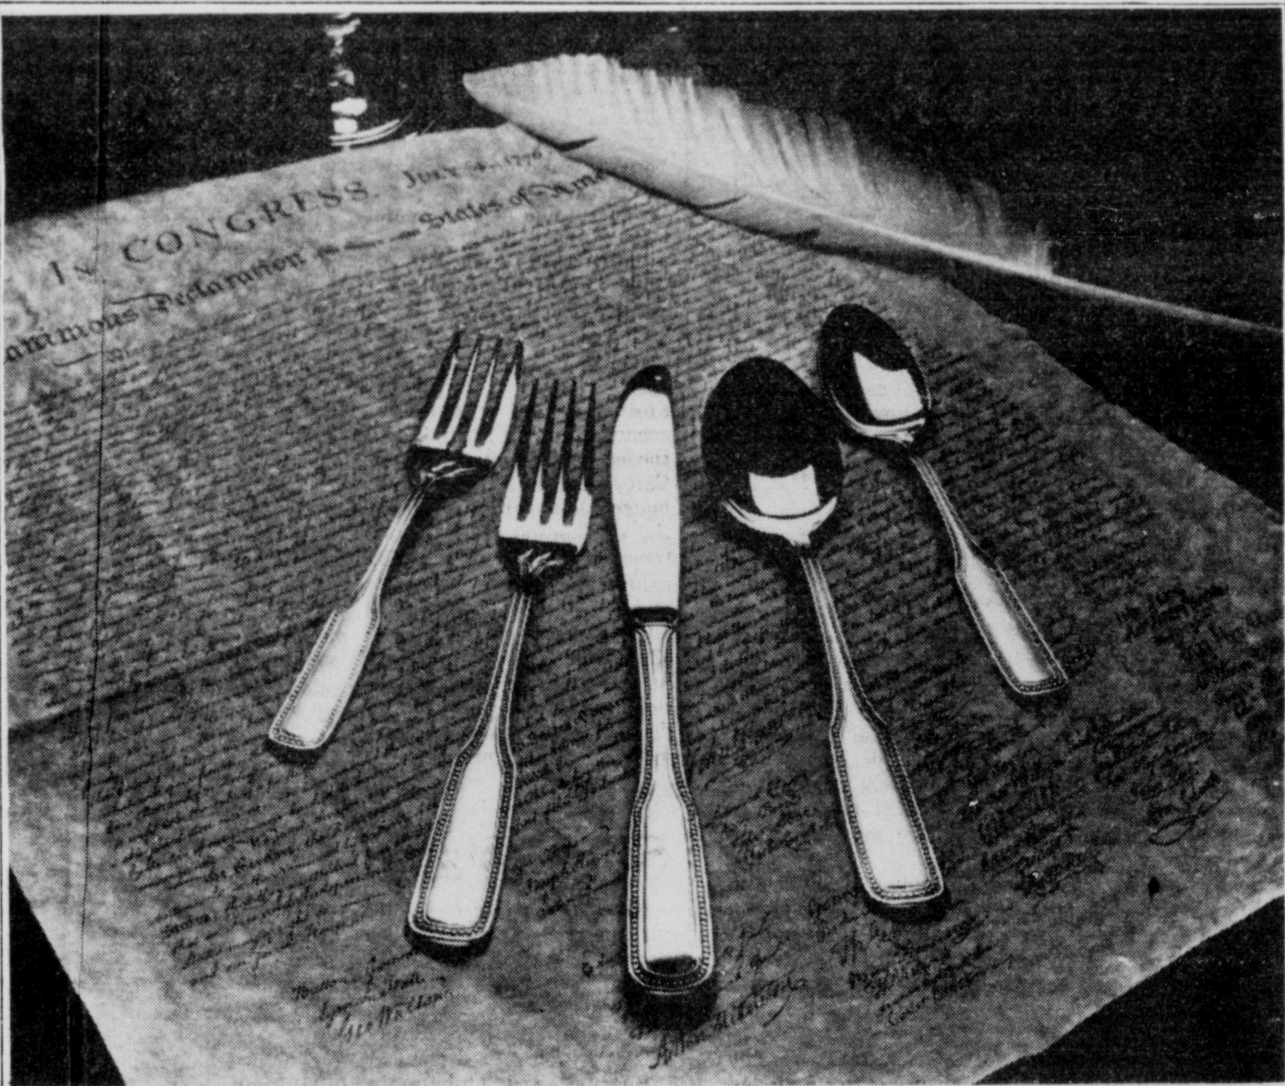

PORT EWEN — Town of Esopus Supervisor Joseph Sills and town budget officer Larry Decker conduct a public information meeting tonight on the proposed construction of a town highway garage.

The meeting, scheduled for 7:30 p.m. in the town hall, will consist of a slide presentation and a discussion of the benefits of the new building.

According to Sills, the town is currently using four separate buildings to store highway department equipment and the buildings are reportedly in need of repair and too costly to maintain. Cost estimates on the new building have been in the area of $135,000 and the town board recently established a capital reserve fund to pay for the construction.

Sills noted that a $50,000 projected surplus in the current highway department budget will be used to help defray the cost of the garage.

STAFF'S CHANCE

Written Word Goes Awry

The written word seems to have extra meaning around election-time — at least to those involved in the political process.

In an article I wrote for the Sunday Freeman on the possibility of the county paying for its welfare needs from possible surpluses in other agency budgets, there seems to have been some misunderstanding of one such written word.

The county budget officer and the county treasurer did "admit" there is a possibility that such money will be found. But it wasn't some deep, dark secret they parted with only after superior investigative reporting on my part.

Frankly, it was a question that no area reporter had ever asked before: "Where could additional welfare money come from?"

And it was answered helpfully and openly by both men. I ask the public's indulgence for misleading them — if that, indeed, was the case — or for burdening them with yet another semi-political issue in this year already overloaded with too many examples of political hair-splitting.

Welfarees Excused from Work

Dear Editor:

Assemblyman Hinchey's recent statement that Woodstock's home relief problem can be solved by more efficient administration at the town level without the necessity for legislative reform at the state level demonstrates a fundamental lack of awareness of the problem and of Woodstock's aggressive efforts to oversee its program, and cannot go unanswered.

Although it is true that a well-run and carefully administered town work program results in some recipients being dropped from the rolls for non-compliance with the home relief work requirement, this approach can only accomplish so much. For, as many people are apparently still unaware, there are large categories of home relief recipients who are excused from performing any work — and we seem to have more than our fair share of them. As Mr. Hinchey apparently does not know, over half of our home relief roll consists of recipients either attending school on a more or less fulltime basis under the state's Vocational Rehabilitation Program or recipients who have been excused from work because they have been given medical excuses by their personal physicians.

In addition, a significant number of our recipients are for all practical purposes transients who under the law are entitled to start collecting home relief as soon as they can find a bed in the township.

I believe I speak for the already overburdened taxpayer when I say that although we are more than willing to pay our fair share for residents of the Town who have fallen upon economic hard times, the towns should not be required to pay over hard earned tax dollars to support, under a home relief program, transients, persons who are physically or mentally disabled, or fulltime students.

No matter how careful or aggressive a town is in administering its program, relief from these unfair aspects of the program simply cannot be brought about. They, as well as all of the rules governing the system are dictated by the state either by state law or administrative regulations, and it is only through reform at the state level that meaningful relief can be accomplished.

To say, as Assemblyman Hinchey did, that we can solve the problem ourselves is nothing more than old-fashioned buck-passing.

A Vote for Denton

Dear Editor:

If the Town of Woodstock is to avoid fiscal insolvency, the members of your Town Board must have the strength to fight the mandates of the State of New York which, given the current economic conditions, are threatening to drive our taxpayers out of Woodstock and bankrupt our businesses.

As you know, we are currently fighting a continuous battle for meaningful reform in the state mandated home relief welfare program.

The present Town Board has demonstrated this strength and for this reason I am asking you to elect Charles Denton as Councilman so we may continue as a proven unit in this fight.

Chuck's experience, knowledge and maturity have been invaluable to the town Town Board in the past year. His background of having been a building inspector, zoning enforcement officer and assessor make him the most qualified board member in dealing with the very pressing zoning and assessment problems the town is facing today.

Chuck initiated and is chairing a committee to revise the zoning ordinance by removing the nuisance regulations from the ordinance. Chuck is also a member of the newly formed Economic Development Committee. Their objectives are to create fuller employment in the area. Not only does he have direct experience in these fields, but he has shown his willingness to get involved and help solve these problems. More important, he has demonstrated a sensitivity to the people of Woodstock and an awareness of the impact of every decision he makes on the town and its residents.

Your Town Board needs people who are knowledgeable about the problems that the town faces today. Chuck Denton has these qualifications, and has proved that he has the courage of his convictions.

Please remember this when you vote, and elect Charles Denton for Town Councilman.

Did Ford Win By A Trick?

Dear Editor:

President Ford leaves this country with a multitude of problems unresolved and even his nomination leaves some unresolved questions.

The Republican Presidential nomination may well have been won by an old Nixon trick — divert attention from the real issues to a dramatic or critical event — in this case the Korean tree-trimming.

Washington had been warned in advance that tampering with the tree could meet with resistance. Why was the eve of the Republican Convention chosen as the time to cut this tree when Washington knew full well it could set off an international incident or even another military involvement? No one wants to change horses in mid-war. Were the unpledged delegates swayed to support Ford because of this? Were the Reagan supporters hoodwinked out of a nomination? Is everything really fair in politics?

No Brawls at Nell Daley's

Dear Editor:

In reference to Betty Dixon's letter about Nell Daley not being here to defend herself (Oct.18). It takes a pretty small mind to put down a person who is dead and gone as Eunice Wilgert did.

I know nothing of "The Well" as it is now and don't care to, but I do remember Nellie and the Well when I moved into Rosendale in the early 1960's, a lonely and friendless kid. Most people had their snoots in the air, and Nell and some of her patrons were among the first friends I made. In fact "The Well" and "The Elms" were the two most decent places in town. Places where a person that wasn't looking for trouble could go for a quiet evening.

The only thing close to a brawl I ever saw in Nell's place (God rest her soul) was the night Nell's bulldog ran a wandering tomcat (four legged) out of the place.

I think Eunice Wiegert is barking up the wrong tree.

Al Smith Night in New York

Jimmy Carter did not wish to attend the annual dinner at the Waldorf-Astoria in tribute to the memory of Al Smith but agreed, finally, to do so only after being persuaded by his advisers that here was probably the single invitation the disdain of which could hurt him deeply.

I live in fear and trembling that Jimmy Carter will be elected President in virtue of the word having got out that when Arthur Schlesinger Jr. volunteered to serve as a speechwriter, he got back from Carter a form letter advising him to apply to the nearest Carter-for-President office. That grand gesture of indifference to the most overbearing liberal ideologue in the United States may very well go down as the equivalent of John F. Kennedy's famous telephone call to the imprisoned Reverend Martin Luther King. "Anybody who rejects Arthur by form letter is my candidate" is the impulse that has lifted Carter's lead from two to six points, never mind the official explanation that it resulted from Mr. Ford's Polish joke. But Jimmy Carter's nerve failed him when it came to turning down the Al Smith Dinner.

He was even a little frightened to go, and some of the guests were a little frightened to have him come. Both Carter and some of his friends feared the possibility that there might be some scattered boos from the predominantly (by no means exclusively) Catholic audience. Carter's position on abortion is more variously conjugated than French irregular verbs. One adviser counseled him to make references to James Fari, a conspicuous presence at the Al Smith Dinners until his recent death.

Carter did as he was told, and more — a lot more. He spoke for 20 minutes, twice as long as the speech earlier in the evening by President Ford, and devoted a great amount of that time comparing Al Smith, to, well, himself. (Both had been governor of a state, both were criticized for their religion, both were mocked for their accents, both ran against a nice guy whose running mate was a senator from Kansas, both their opponents said prosperity was just around the corner...) And so it went. Reminding one of the Devil's Dictionary, which defines admiration as one's polite recognition of other people's similarity to oneself. The 2,000 people present to cherish the memory of Al Smith were invited to deduce that Al Smith was reincarnated in — Jimmy Carter.

But for all this, Carter spoke well. His speech was graceful, well delivered, and felicitously phrased. The nervousness dissipated as he moved along, and he received a warm, if less than ardent, reception.

Mr. Ford also spoke well. His notes look something like an orchestral score, so carefully have his assistants indicated where he is to make an emphasis, where to raise, where to lower his voice. His improvement as an orator during the past few months is remarkable. And he maintained in his speeches enough references to his responsibilities to remind those whose attention wandered that he was, after all, the President of the United States. He was, as he put it, "running the country and the campaign at the same time."

He made a reference possibly oblique enough not to disturb the pro-abortion vote, but palpable enough to please the anti-abortionists, when he spoke of the "dignity of hman life," a phrase which in the abstract would alienate only B.F.Skinner. The tough-minded, experienced dais of judges, generals, politicians, and superstars, was clearly impressed. If you are going to deliver a bad speech, that is a bad audience to deliver it in front of.

The occasion is impressive. Although it is indeed preeminantly Catholic, the money raised is distributed with iron impartiality among Christian and Jewish enterprises. It is something of a handshake proffered annually by Catholics to Jews, and the dinner chairman, Charles Silver, irradiates the general good feeling. The patron is of course the Cardinal of New York, Terence Cooke, whose charm lies in this diffidence, and in his obstinate political neutrality.

No one is invited to that dinner in order to be ambushed. (In 1968, the guests were President Johnson, and presidential contenders Nixon and Humphrey). The atmosphere is genuinely convivial, and one finds oneself, surveying all those faces, sensing all those little and great magnetic fields, responding to an eclectic humor liberated by a transcendent peity, serene, as one is seldom permitted to be these days, at the remarkable concinnity of America.

Letters of Clarification

WASHINGTON—With everyone mis-speaking these days, "clarification experts" have been put on a 24-hour shift answering mail from groups that have been offended by something someone has said.

Since everyone is so busy campaigning I thought I might provide some form letters that could be sent out to mollify the populace.

This is one President Ford's people could send.

Dear Mrs. Gronowski,

The President was very happy to receive your letter concerning his remarks where he alluded to the fact that he was proud that Poland was not dominated by the Soviet Union.

What he meant to say, in the heat of the debate, was that he was proud that the Soviet people were not dominated by Poland.

The President has always had a very strong interest in what is going on in Eastern Europe.

If President Ford is re-elected his first act will be to send Secretary of State Henry Kissinger to Warsaw to see if Poland is dominated by anybody. If Mr. Kissinger discovers that it is, he will give Poland seven nuclear power plants, six squadrons of F-16 fighter planes and 12 missile cruisers.

The President believes a strong Poland is essential to the defense of the free world, and will do everything in his power to see that it never becomes a Communist satellite.

Sincerely yours, ★★

This is one Gov. Carter's people could mail out.

Dear Mr. Archibald,

Thank you for your kind letter concerning Gov. Carter's interview in Playboy magazine. I would like to explain to you that Mr. Carter did not say he was lusting after your wife. What he said was that he has lusted after women in his heart but God has always forgiven him.

The governor, according to our records, has never met your wife, and therefore the possibility of him lusting after her is out of the question.

This is nothing against your wife as it's possible that if the governor had met her he might have committed adultery in his heart.

But this is a hypothetical question, and there is no reason for you to be suspicious of your wife or the governor. To put your mind at ease we have rescheduled Mr. Carter's itinerary so he will not campaign in Mayville, Kan., this year and his chances of running into Mrs. Archibald will be nil.

Sincerely, ★★

The third form letter could be sent out by exSecretary of Agriculture Earl Butz' people.

Dear Mr. Washington, Mr. Butz was very disturbed by your letter concerning his remarks as to why black people did not vote Republican.

For some reason the press misquoted him. What he really said was that "All that the fine hardworking Negroes in this country want are tight sneakers so they can win more gold medals in the Olympics, loose blue jeans to enable them to dance easier and a warm place to cook their wonderful soul food." This was said on an airplane and because of engine noise John Dean misinterpreted what the secretary meant.

Sincerely, ★★

The final letter could be sent out by the Pentagon.

Dear Rabbi Schwartz,

General Brown has asked me to assure you he does not consider Israel a burden to the United States. What he meant to say was that some of his best friends were burdens—or some of his best burdens were friends—but in any case they were all Jews.

Yours truly,

Barons of Booze Buy Influence

WASHINGTON—The end of Prohibition hasn't stopped the booze barons from trying to buy off the politicians. The evidence can be found in the secret files of the Jim Beam Company, one of the nation's largest liquor manufacturers.

The company's activities have attracted the attention of the Treasury Department, which is secretly investigating Beam for possible federal liquor law violations. We have also conducted our own probe. Here are the details:

In a number of states, the liquor industry is regulated by state liquor commissions. Liquor manufacturers sell their products directly to the state, which stores the booze in state-owned warehouses and then resells it to retailers.

A liquor company's profits in these states, therefore, is dependent upon the good graces of the liquor commissioners. The Jim Beam Co., according to its own confidential records, has undertaken to keep these officials happy.

Jim Beam executives treated employees of the Michigan Liquor Commission, for example, to a weekend on the town in Chicago. According to one internal memo, the company shelled out $383.63 for cocktails, dinner, entertainment and miscellaneous "gratuities" at the posh Drake Hotel, not to mention the hotel expenses. The weekend was written off as a sales expense.

One cautious Beam executive, Robert Weisenberger, was fearful that someone might find out about the partying. "I would appreciate it if you would not attach this memo to the permanent file," wrote Weisenberger. "Please read and destroy."

On another occasion, free booze was delivered to the home of a member of the Pennsylvania Liquor Board. Beam officials also wine and dined regulatory officials from Iowa, Maine, New Hampshire and North Carolina at a national brewers convention in San Juan, Puerto Rico.

According to one company memo summarizing the convention, a case of Jim Beam was used "for the day to day entertainment of the commissioners." This was supplemented by lavish dinner parties for the commissioners, costing hundreds of dollars.

The Beam executives, it seems, touched every base. At one dinner party, the "gratuity" was, in the words of one company official, "slightly higher than normal." "Because of this slightly higher tip," the official stated in an internal memo, "the captain had the restaurant management place an order for eight cases of Jim Beam."

Beam representatives planned other moves to ingratiate themselves with those who could help their business. In another "confidential" memo, Weisenberger suggested that the company transfer a special account to a Salt Lake City bank, because it would please a member of the Utah Liquor Commission whose relative was a director of the bank.

"This commissioner has unlimited influence and leverage in Utah," the memo states. "She has and will continue to be of great service to the Beam Company...recently she was instrumental in helping us secure four new listings in the State of Utah. Believe me, she carries a lot of weight." The commissioner was later indicted, but not convicted, for accepting free supplies of Beam whiskey.

Footnote: Top Beam officials either did not return our calls or refused to comment. Weisenberger acknowledged the authenticity of the memos to our associate Larry Krtowitz. He explained he was "overenthusiastic about impressing some people."

HOT AIR ALERT—The government's two top environmental agencies are hoodwinking 37 states into believing their air quality is improving when in fact it's the same old poison.

This is the finding of the Public Interest Campaign, a consumer group which analyzed the new Pollutant Standards Index. The index was proposed by the Environmental Protection Agency and the White House Council on Environmental Quality.

The consumer group claims that the new index would permit higher pollution content in the air before an "air pollution alert" can be announced to warn the elderly and chronically ill. In the last four years, Washington, D.C., has had 61 days' worth of alerts. The new system would have cut that figure to seven days. The air quality, of course, would be the same. Similar comparisons apply in 35 other states.

"Clearly, the CEQ-EPA proposal is a numbers game," says the Public Interest Campaign. The federal environmentalists, however, insist the new index is intended to standardize all pollution announcements.

WASHINGTON WHIRL—The Democratic National Committee asked Capitol Hill Republicans for funds to help defeat their GOP colleagues and President Ford. One solicited staffer, Walt Klein, who works for Rep. William Armstrong, R-Colo., was so furious he wrote to Attorney General Edward Levi urging him to prosecute the Democrats. Federal law forbids such solicitation of government workers.

—The organization of American States has given Juan Tack, the former foreign minister of Panama, $100,000 to conduct a study of U.S.-Panamanian relations since 1821. Apparently, the OAS forgot that a House subcommittee once accused Tack of involvement in a heroin smuggling ring. Tack denied the charges.

—Rep. Charles Rose, D-N.C., is already saving gas by purring around the Capitol in a tiny electric car. Now he plans to save more energy by installing a solar battery charger on the vehicle. At present, the battery is charged in the House garage, for which Rose has scrupulously paid $2.57 to the U.S. Treasury.

7,000 Jobs Are In Works

ALBANY, N.Y.(UPI) — The state has applied for $172 million of the $230 million in federal funds expected to be distributed in New York under the new Public Works Employment Program, the governor's office announced today.

If all of the projects were to be approved, they would provide more than 7,000 construction and construction-related jobs, Gov. Hugh Carey said in a statement.

Today was the first day for state or local government to file applications for the public works funds through the Economic Development Administration.

Dozens of highway reconstruction and parks projects were included in the list of 123 proposals submitted.

Among the larger grants applied for were: • $37.5 million for construction at City University of New York, including $26 million for construction at the North Academic Center building. • $15 million for Amherst campus of State University of Buffalo. • $15 million for a treatment center at St. Lawrence Psychiatric Center at Ogdensburg. • $4.4 million for alterations at building of the Alcoholism Research Institute in Buffalo. • $2.3 million for improvements in electrical systems at Central Islip Psychiatric Center. • $3 million for conversion of buildings at Albion Correctional facility for use as a male prison. • $4.6 million for construction of the new Sheridan Avenue steam tunnel in Albany. • $2.4 million for construction of a service facility at State University College at Buffalo. • $4.2 million for renovation of the federal building in Albany for State University central administration. • $5 million for construction of physical education building at the SUNY College at Old Westbury. • $5 million for a science building at SUNY Ag and Technical College at Delhi. • $3.2 million for a 1,000 car parking facility at SUNY Stony Brook.

Sniffing Moynihan Barks at Buckley

ROCHESTER, N.Y.(UPI) — It was drizzling in Rochester and Daniel P. Moynihan had a cold. He'd also had his fill of Sen. James L. Buckley.

The Democratic Senate candidate surprised reporters Monday with a sudden, stinging, attack on Buckley for using campaign tactics he called "the kind of crudeness of millionaires."

The former U.N. ambassador also charged that Buckley's record is one of "hostility" toward reductions in federal income taxes, while Moynihan is in favor of them.

Moynihan's remarks were aimed at a cornerstone of Buckley's campaign which was to depict the Democrat as a free spender while he was a guardian of the taxpayers' pocketbook.

Moynihan's anger was directed at charges made by a Buckley aide a month ago that he ran up $10,000 in debts while ambassador to India and was lax in paying them off.

"It's absolutely untrue," a furious Moynihan told an impromptu news conference in a Rochester shopping mall. He said he incurred $3,200 in debts for supplies he personally bought to stock the embassy commissary but paid them off shortly after his term as ambassador ended in January 1975.

"Here is Senator Buckley, this so-called gentleman, digging around in India, trying to say I didn't pay my grocery bills," Moynihan said, his temper rising. "What standard of public behavior is this?"

The original question was raised by Buckley's campaign manager, Leonard Saffir, who said he was given the information two years ago by William Saxbe, Moynihan's successor as U.S. ambassador to India.

Saxbe wrote Saffir a letter saying Moynihan had paid off $10,000 in debts shortly before his confirmation as U.N. ambassador last year. Saxbe also warned Saffir about conducting a "negative campaign."

In response to Moynihan's charges, a spokesman for Buckley said, "His argument is with Mr. Saxbe."

"Mr. Moynihan is obviously worried all of a sudden. We haven't heard from him all during the campaign," the spokesman said. "He's obviously concerned with his large slippage as reflected by the polls."

Moynihan's tirade was set off by Buckley's staff releasing two letters from a Harvard alumnus to the university's president, Derek C. Bok, questioning the propriety of the Democrat running for office while teaching classes there.

Carter Flies to Southern Rally, Ford to Pittsburgh

Campaign Shifts into Final Countdown

By UPI

The campaign's final week countdown begins today, and politics shifts into all-systems-go with all four top candidates seeking votes in key states.

Jimmy Carter, who took two days off to rest and tape some television spots, scheduled a television interview before flying to a rally at Columbia, S.C., to shore up his southern support in a state said to be wavering. Carter later was flying to Illinois.

President Ford flew to Pit-sburgh, with later stops scheduled in Illinois.

Both vice presidential candidates, Walter Mondale and Robert Dole, also mined the industrial northeast after a Monday both would rather forget.

Ford, in obvious good humor Monday as he made his way northward on the Pacific Coast, cracked jokes at a regional meeting of the National Association of Broadcasters in Portland, Ore.

Asked his view on the debates, Ford said he thought they might have been better "if Jimmy Carter answered the questions and I questioned my answers."

Seriously, he said, he would like to see debates "institutionalized in our American political system," but does not know how that could be done because of the equal time conflicts.

Polls in the state show the presidential race very close with one survey by The Oregonian newspaper giving Carter 43 per cent, Ford 40 per cent, independent Eugene McCarthy 6 per cent and undecided 11 per cent.

Earlier in Seattle, Ford talked about the economy, called for an end to "noise pollution" at airports and asked for regulatory reform to "free aviation from arbitrary and unnecessary restrictions and regulations."

In an interview Monday on ABC-TV, Carter was told there was some concern that he had an "overweening sense of mission and wanted to be president too much."

He smiled and replied, "I prefer to win battles than lose them."

Both Mondale and Dole met their first major scheduling snafus Monday.

Mondale arose before dawn to greet steelworkers on the early shift — and found it had begun 10 minutes before he arrived. An open air rally was canceled because of the weather, and only 19 of an invited 50 unemployed workers showed up for a breakfast meeting with him.

He later urged crowds to vote and reminded them that one extra Democratic vote per precinct would have elected Hubert Humphrey instead of Richard Nixon in 1968.

Dole finally made it to Bangor, Maine, for an appearance that had been on and off so many times no one was sure he would arrive at all, the hotel and motel reservations were cancelled, and reporters' telephones weren't connected.

When he did start campaigning, Dole sharpened his attack on the Democratic ticket, particularly on Mondale whose proximity to the presidency he said would be "frightening."

China is Softer on S. Korea

HONG KONG (UPI) — China appears to have softened considerably its position on the presence of American troops in South Korea.

This development was signaled by one of China's top military leaders in the first foreign policy remarks by any Chinese leader since the official public announcement of the appointment of Hua Kuofeng as new Communist party chairman and the purge of four radical leaders.

Chen Hsi-lien, speaking in his capacity as a vice premier, said North Korea's demand that "U.S. troops must withdraw from South Korea" was "entirely justified and reasonable."

However, he did not give the strong Chinese support for this demand that has been stated in previous years.

Chen, who is a member of the party's politburo and commander of the key Peking military region, spoke at a Korean Embassy reception Monday night. The reception commemorated the 26th anniversary of the entry of Chinese People's Volunteer forces into the Korean War.

Chen's remarks were transmitted by the official New China News Agency and broadcast by Peking Radio.

"Twenty-three years have elapsed since the armistice in Korea," he said. "But the U.S. troops are still hanging on in South Korea."

North Korea, he said, has maintained that the problem of Korean reunification must be settled by the Koreans without outside interference and "that the United Nations command must be disbanded and the U.S. troops must withdraw from South Korea. This stand is entirely justified and reasonable."

Chen said China supported the Korean people "in their just struggle for the independent and peaceful reunification of their fatherland."

But he did not directly state Peking's support for the withdrawal of American troops as he did in a speech made at a similar reception last year and in 1974.

Turning to China's internal affairs, Chen said, "the domestic situation of China is excellent."

He said the appointment of Hua and the purge of Chiang Ching, Mao Tse-tung's widow, and three other radical leaders, Chang Chun-chao, Wang Hungwen and Yao Wen-yuan, had the full support of the Chinese armed forces and people.

Freeman photographer Carey was there and came away with these results

Holiday Touch Was in the Air At the Armory

KINGSTON—There's a touch of the holiday in the air—even though it's just the closing days of October but with November and December coming on all too fast, at least for some.

The gaiety of the holiday season was very much in evidence recently during the annual Christmas Open House sponsored by the Ulster County Home Economics Division of the Cooperative Extension.

The New York State Armory on Manor Avenue was the scene and for all the member clubs taking part the Christmas holiday season was the focal point.

Exhibits of various items—all with the holiday theme, of course, ranged from gifts, toys, tree decorations, candles and table settings.

The Freeman photographer was on hand for the pre-holiday festivities and caught some of the offerings exhibited by the various Cooperative Extension members.

In the upper right photo, various flower displays catch the eye of these women who flock to this exhibit, thinking ahead to Yule time.

All in all, the Christmas Open House proved to be an exciting and eventful day for both exhibitors and the onlookers—all, no doubt, with thoughts about that big day coming up in December.

'Woodie' Broun Gives Up CBS Stint But Still on the Move

By HOLLISTER STURGES
Special Correspondent
WOODSTOCK—"This is Heywood Hale Broun at the Maverick Concert Hall in Woodstock, New York." With these words, Mr. Broun, known as "Woodie" to his family, friends and colleagues in the news department of the Columbia Broadcasting System's television network, concluded his regular Saturday evening telecast just over a year ago.

With the assistance of Dan Rather, "Woodie" devoted that particular Saturday telecast to a commemoration of the 60th anniversary of the famed Maverick Concerts, reminding his unseen audience of the fact that this chamber music series is the oldest of its kind in the nation. That evening also marked one of his last regular Saturday appearances.

"I just got tired of racing around the country every week, catching planes, missing connections, and seeing less and less of my family," he told us in a recent interview at the Broun home on Plochman Lane, Woodstock. Woodie became a regular member of the Saturday news staff of CBS in February, 1966. He averaged 60 telecasts a year, devoted mostly to outstanding sporting events and interviews with the top stars of the country's playing fields.

Earlier in 1975, he featured the late Harvey Fite in the sculptor's famous "Opus 40" stone quarry in nearby High Woods, thus adding another string to the bow of this area's cultural standing.

Because of his wide vocabulary, rich knowledge of history, and ease of articulation, "Woodie" has often been referred to as the "Eric Sevareid of Sports." He weaves into his narratives many historical highlights of any locale to which he is assigned. Paul Revere returns to life in Boston, Sam Houston and his patriots are defending the Alamo in Texas—and so it goes, with unerring accuracy and humor to delight and educate his listeners.

Those who have watched

Heywood Hale Broun and his wife, Jane, watching last spring's annual auction of yearlings in Lexington, Ky.

tors of the Woodstock Playhouse. He is a member of New York's Coffee House, the Franklin Inn of Philadelphia, and he enjoys honorary membership in the Dutch Treat Club of Manhattan.

Being the son of a distinguished father may have its handicaps for some, but not for "Woodie." His father, the late Heywood Broun, was one of the nation's most distinguished columnists, and in the company of other such notable personages as Robert Benchley, George Kaufman, Dorothy Parker and Alexander Woolcott, founded the renowned Algonquin Round Table Circle.

"Woodie" is married to the former Jane Lloyd-Jones, an actress he met at the Woodstock Playhouse where she was the resident leading lady. He was just starting a theatrical career which he pursued for the next 17 years. They have one son, Heywood Orren Broun, nicknamed "Hob." "Hob" is 26, and carrying on the family tradition as he currently puts the finishing touches on a novel soon to be published.

Broun and Jane sail for Europe Sunday aboard the Queen Elizabeth II. He will literally talk his way across the Atlantic, for in return for their passage, he will give several lectures to fellow passengers. The couple will debark at Cherbourg and return on the QE II after enjoying a month's vacation in Provence, France.

"I guess I've logged a million miles by air," he told us as he and Jane finished tempting bowls of homemade borscht, prepared from their own garden beets. They acknowledge with modest pride that their garden yields some 30 pounds of fresh produce a week during the warm season. "What we can't enjoy now we preserve for the winter," Jane noted, as "Woodie" added canning jars to his shopping list.

Dear Abby

Motel Maid Airs Her Gripes Sans Tips

DEAR ABBY: About motel maids who never get tipped: I've been a motel maid for more years than I care to remember.

Would you believe a grown man wetting a bed? (No tip.) Or a 10-year-old boy who is a nightly bed-wetter whose mother doesn't have enough sense to carry a rubber sheet? I'll bet she has one on his bed at home. (No tip.)

And how about those men who read dirty books that cost from $2 to $20 each, but are so ashamed of what they read that they stick it under the mattress or behind the ice machine on their way out? (No tip.)

I'll take the polite Japanese people any time. They leave a dollar under their pillow daily, and their rooms are as clean when they leave as when they check in.—HAD IT AT HYATT.

DEAR HAD IT: A registered nurse registers a complaint. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: A "motel maid" wrote you recently, begging for tips. She complained about changing bed linen, scrubbing bathrooms, picking up soiled towels and gathering trash thrown near but not in the trash can. She said an extra dollar would be appreciated for the dirty work she has to do.

I won't go into detail about what we hospital nurses have to do. I'll just say that we work up to our knees in the unappetizing byproducts of illness, infection and old age. And do we get tips? Of course not! We get a salary and do the job we're paid to do.

A housekeeper and a nurse's aid are paid salaries comparable to a hotel maid's. I don't know one fellow employee who would not be insulted if a tip were offered. And that goes for the orderlies and the kitchen and cafeteria help, too.—JUST AN R. N.

DEAR ABBY: My problem is my 8-year-old daughter who has recently developed a crush on a boy in her class. He is nine years old and has flunked a grade. He walks her to and from school every day.

All she talks about is kissing this boy and writing love notes. She carries these love notes wherever she goes. The boy is very mature for his age, but seems polite and nice.

This boy calls her two and three times an evening.

Last night she asked if she could go to the movies with him (a matinee). She wants me to drop them off there.

Should I allow her to talk to him so often? And how long should an 8-year-old be allowed to talk to a boy on the phone?

Should I try to discourage this relationship, or will it make her more eager to see him?

I really need your advice, Abby. She is our only child, and I want to raise her right.—CONCERNED MOM.

DEAR CONCERNED: I think your daughter is too young to be so preoccupied with one boy. Listen to her attentively, however, and keep the lines of communication open. Never ridicule, belittle or put her down for her feelings. (They're normal, though somewhat premature.)

Lay down some ground rules: One call an evening and 10 minutes is long enough.

Put the kibbosh on their going to a matinee together. That's dating, and she's too young to date.

Give your daughter guidelines she can live with. It's important for you to be her friend and confidante during her growing-up years.

Everyone has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69700, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069. Enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

munity room of Sawyer Savings Bank, Market St.

The discussion for the evening will cover the human paranormal experience, more popularly referred to as Psychic Phenomenon or psychic experience; theories and proven conclusions concerning the meaning and nature of this aspect of human experience; description and definition of various kinds of phenomena; recent research and conclusions. He will discuss the current upsurge in both interest and proliferation of this type of human experience.

Providing he can successfully design and arrange one, he is contemplating conducting a group extra-sensory perceptual experiment involving the audience.

Always avidly interested in the nature of his existence, Woodcock has for 25 years pursued this interest as a student, and in research within and outside of the laboratory situation with personal extra-sensory experimentation. His most recent field of interest is in the dream process.

A landscape contractor-designer for 20 years, a private pilot for seven, Woodcock is currently teaching Psychic Phenomena at Ulster County Community College. He has been associated with the American Society for Psychic Research in New York City, The American Humanistic Psychology Movement, the Vermont Institute of Community Involvement and the Institute for the Study of Human Knowledge.

Mountain Top Historical To Hear About Indian Sites

HUNTER—Indian sites in the Hudson, Mohawk and Susquehanna Valleys will be the subject of the Mountain Top Historical Society meeting at Hunter School Cafeteria, Thursday, Oct. 28.

Edward R. Kozacek, a teacher in the Catsackie-Athens Central School, who has worked numerous Indian sites in eastern and central New York State, will be the speaker and the public is invited to attend.

Although it has been established that Indian tribes did not inhabit the mountain top and Indian raids in Greene County were far less frequent than in nearby areas, the clothes were used in transporting captives and the procedure caused constant anxiety among the settlers. The colonists were sufficiently uncomfortable to have chosen to build four forts for protection. The Indians used the mountains for hunting until after the Hardenbergh Patent. All regarded the area as Indian land.

Kozacek will present a slide lecture program which will reveal some facts that have been established regarding area Indians. He received his BA at SUNY, Albany, where he majored in Anthropology and History. He is co-author of the new Greene County history entitled "Greene County, New York '76 Bicentennial Overview: Beginnings and Background," copies of which will be available for purchase at the meeting.

Cappella Festiva Concert

POUGHKEEPSIE—Stravinsky's Mass and Octet for Wind Instruments, and J.S. Bach's Cantata 106, will be performed Friday, Oct. 29, 8 p.m. at Christ Episcopal Church, Academy St., Poughkeepsie, by the Cappella Festiva Chamber Choir and Orchestra.

Cappella Festiva is a professional choral instrumental ensemble comprised of 48 Hudson Valley musicians, 24 singers and 24 instrumentalists. Cappella Festiva, which was formed in the fall of 1974 and which receives support from the New York State Council of the Arts, specializes in the performance of music of the 17th and 18th Centuries. Jameson Marvin is music director.

Tickets for the concert, which are $4 for adults and $2 for fulltime students and senior citizens, may be obtained from any member or from Mrs. Edwin Peters, Hurley, or Mrs. Guy Goodfellow, Hyde Park.

NAACP Dinner

ELLENVILLE—Professor Howard Johnson of SUNY at New Paltz will be featured speaker at the annual banquet and dance of the Ellenville Branch of NAACP Oct. 31 at the Granit Hotel.

Professor Johnson has a varied background as a lecturer on race relations and black history and as a dancer at the Cotton Club in New York City.

He also starred in a Broadway musical together with Imogene Coca, and is now an associate professor of sociology at New Paltz.

Peg Leg Bates will be master of ceremonies.

Why Don't You Like Your Mom?

My son never fails to amaze me. At age 21, he has come up with a new way to break his neck. It's called a skateboard.

Frankly, I'm tired. I've dedicated my entire life to keeping that kid whole and at a time of my life when I should be eating chocolate sandwiches and getting up at the crack of noon, I'm a bundle of nerves. It started with the two-wheel bicycle. As I ran along beside him, clutching his sweater with one hand and the bicycle seat with the other, I yelled, "You could kill yourself on this thing." Sure enough, my housecoat caught in the spokes and I almost made a wheel out of myself.

The pogo stick was worse. As he sprang about the house, his head inches from the ceiling, I tried to shield him from falling into a lamp and he lost his balance... pinning me between the floor and his body.

When he wanted a horse, I tried to warn him that I just wasn't up to it, but did he listen? He did not. As I led the beast around by the reins, I was repaid for my vigilance by being stomped on by a 1500-pound horse.

"We are not going out for football," I told him the summer of his 15th year. "What do you mean what has that got to do with me? I'm your mother. If you want to kill your mother, I can't stop you, but every Mother's Day... mark my word...you're going to feel just terrible." (I carry with me today a trick knee suffered when I ran onto the playing field with an extra mouthpiece to protect $1500 worth of braces.)

It never ended. He jumped off the high board at the pool just to give me stomach cramps and just when I thought I had myself under control, he came home with his learner's permit to drive. (The only boy I know who was given a ticket for going 25 mph... in reverse.)

I thought all of it was behind me until the other night when he was leaving the house with this little board with the wheels under his arm.

"Where are you going?" I asked.

"Trying to find an empty swimming pool, a hill, or a paved ditch. Then I am going to balance myself on this little board up the side of it until I fall off."

I climbed on the skateboard, clutched him around the waist and closed my eyes. "Why don't you like your mother?" I whimpered.

Can McVay Turn Giants Around?

SPORTS TODAY

PLEASANTVILLE (UPI) — Andy Robustelli spent all day Sunday defending Bill Arnsperger after the New York Giants dropped their seventh straight game.

On Monday he fired him. Robustelli, the Giants' director of operations, relieved Arnsperger of his duties as head coach and replaced him with one of his assistants, John McVay, in an attempt to salvage something from a season that has seen the Giants lose all seven of their starts.

After the seventh loss, a 27-0 humiliation at the hands of Pittsburgh, Robustelli admitted to the media that he was embarrassed by his team's performance but said "the players should be even more embarrassed."

He said "the coaches can't catch the football for people. Maybe we don't have players good enough to win."

Robustelli said he wanted to meet with the club's owner, Wellington Mara, and review the films of the loss before making any decision as to the future of Arnsperger, who was in the final year of his three-year contract.

Robustelli informed Arnsperger of the club's decision shortly after he arrived at the club's training base Monday afternoon.

"It was our feeling we had reached a critical point and we did not want to lose what we had accomplished up to this point," said Robustelli. "We feel that Arnsperger left us in a much better position in every department than when he came here—and that would include personnel, organization, offseason conditioning and approach to the draft.

"Everything was improved except our record."

Arnsperger took over in 1974 and the Giants finished a miserable 2-12; in 1975, Arnsperger coached the Giants to a 5-9 record. He won just two of 19 games against opponents in the Giants' division, the NFC East, and in his 2½ seasons he never beat the same team twice.

Bill Arnsperger

Arnsperger said his goodbyes to the team's regular writers after getting the word from Robustelli and told them: "There are three things I have now that I will continue to have —my family, my God and my ability."

He then shook hands with the writers, left camp with his wife, Betty, and told Robustelli he did not wish to accept any further calls.

McVay, 45, was in his first year as an assistant with the Giants after spending 1½ seasons as head coach of the Memphis Southmen of the World Football League. He joined the Giants this year along with his Memphis defensive coordinator, Jay Fry, and five of his Southmen players, including Larry Csonka.

"We looked around the staff and we felt John had a lot of experience as coach," Robustelli said. "He was respected. His record speaks for itself."

Robustelli said the appointment of McVay was not necessarily an interim one and said a final determination would be made at the end of the season. He said McVay was to meet with the players Tuesday morning before beginning preparations for Sunday's game against the Philadelphia Eagles.

The players were given Monday off. McVay spent three years as an assistant coach at Michigan State and eight years as a head coach at the University of Dayton before taking over the Southmen. He led Memphis to a 17-3 record the first season and 8-4 the second before the league folded last October.

The Giants are the only established team still without a win this season. The only other winless team is the expansion Tampa Bay Buccaneers, who are in their inaugural season.

Arnsperger becomes the fourth coach to make a premature departure from his team, joining Marion Campbell of Atlanta, Rick Forzano of Detroit and Lou Saban of Buffalo. Campbell was fired while Forzano and Saban resigned.

Cards Aren't Looking For Any Excuses

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Washington Redskins kept coming up with fumbles like they were four-leaf clovers Monday night in defeating the St. Louis Cardinals, 20-10, in the mud and rain. But George Allen insisted it was more than luck that produced the victory.

"We had to play our best game on offense, defense and special teams and that's what we did," he said after the nationally televised battle, which saw the Redskins set a National Football League record with eight fumble recoveries.

Three of the recoveries led to 13 points — a pair of Mark Moseley field goals in the first half and a fourth quarter touchdown dash of seven yards by Mike Thomas that put Washington ahead 13-10. Eddie Brown followed with a 71-yard TD punt return, sewing up the game.

The win tied the two NFC Eastern Division rivals at 5-2 at the halfway point of the season, one game behind the Dallas Cowboys, the Redskins' Sunday opponent.

The drenching rain that rendered the field ankle-deep in water and the middle of the gridiron into a buffalo wallow was undoubtedly partially responsible for the nine St. Louis fumbles, but the Cardinals weren't using the weather as an alibi.

"I can't make any excuses," said Cards quarterback Jim Hart, who passed for 215 yards and one touchdown but was intercepted twice. "They handled the ball too."

Cardinal Coach Don Coryell echoed Hart.

"Both teams played on the same field," he said. "Obviously, we didn't hold the ball as well as they did. The ball was just so wet and peoples' hands were wet."

Two first quarter fumble recoveries set up Moseley field goals of 34 and 33 yards for a 6-0 Washington lead, but Hart's seven-yard touchdown throw to

J.V. Cain just before halftime and Jim Bakken's 32-yard field goal on the first play of the final quarter put the Cards ahead, 10-6.

However, one of Terry Metcalf's four fumbles was recovered by Dennis Johnson on the St. Louis seven yard line and Thomas immediately swept around end for the go-ahead score.

Less than two minutes later, Brown took a St. Louis punt on his 29, cut swiftly through the middle and took off down the sideline toward the end zone with a succession of Cardinal tacklers diving vainly at his heels.

"It was either a case of poor tackling or a great run or a little of both," said Corvett. "It's just one of those games we've got to wipe from our minds. We just can't count ourselves out of the race."

Allen called Brown "a guy who doesn't have great speed but who gives 110 percent" and said he keeps the Cleveland Browns' reject on the squad because he has "good hands for catching punts."

Brown said of his feat, "First I had to catch the ball and I guess that's what I do best. I think I broke four or five tackles and the last 10 yards my shoes felt like they weighed 10 pounds."

"Everything happened so fast, I didn't think about fumbling. I just kept going."

Hart and Cain grumbled a little about an interference call against the Cardinal tight end which made them settle for Bakken's field goal instead of a touchdown.

"It may have been the big turning point of the game," said Cain. "But we lost because we had too many turnovers...I thought the flag was a little late."

"I wasn't able to see when the flag was thrown," said Hart, "but how can you call interference in weather like that when everybody's slipping and sliding?"

KINGSTON — Coleman High School was able to keep the fires lit Monday through its damp and rainy Ulster County Athletic League soccer contest against Fallsburgh, blanking the Comets, 5-0.

The win moved Coleman into sole possession of first place with a 5-2-1 record. Rondout Valley, which had led, was upset by Onteora 1-0 and slid just behind the leader, with one game at hand.

Coleman coach Roland Augustine was elated not only over the score, but he was impressed with the character of play. "We controlled the game unbelievably well in light of the conditions," he said.

Joe Schell opened the scoring for Coleman 14.31 into the first half with the successful conversion of a penalty kick. Then Charlie McDonough went into action scoring the first of his four goals late in the half with Tom Palmer getting the assist, to give the team a 2-0 lead.

McDonough again went to work immediately as play resumed and scored his second goal with the help of Joe Schell at 1:15 for an awesome three goal lead. Fallsburgh was unable to find the formula to control McDonough's free reign of the field and he again struck with Schell's assistance at 24:34, and then finished off the scoring in the final minutes with an assist by Joe Micozzi.

"The passing was superlative," said Augustine. "We played very cohesively whereas it appeared that Fallsburgh played individually. Everyone collectively worked well together and it was a great win for us."

Onteora held on to a first period goal by David Delano to squeeze by Rondout Valley. Delano scored at 12:00 on a one on one with Rondout goalkeeper Earl Little to give his team the only margin it needed.

"We didn't run in the second half," said Rondout coach Andy Lutz. "Our fullbacks were flat. We just couldn't put things together when we should have, but it wasn't really a bad game for us."

Onteora coach Ron Valle was naturally pleased with the win, but he was especially satisfied since he had to make some substitutions due to injuries and he played his freshmen and junior team members who did an outstanding job. "The turning point of our season, was the play of our younger kids," Valle said.

Valle praised the performance of Matt Ernest, "who played his best game of the year, holding the middle," and mentioned Bob Berkeley, who was outstanding on defense. He also cited Kurt Jennings, who was assigned to contain high scoring Mike Mills, and Tom Stephenson who did an outstanding job at fullback.

Onteora will take its inspired team up against Fallsburgh at home on Wednesday, while Rondout Valley will do battle with Coleman in a game of great significance with regard to league honors.

Rhinebeck Clinches DCSL Title

beat us to it."

Erik tenBroeke put Kingston out in front on a one and one set up by Charlie Murphy. tenBroeke took the ball and just blooped it up over goaltender Joe Siebold for the score.

It took Rhinebeck almost the whole game to get on the board, but it scored two goals within five minutes to earn its victory. John Marvin headed the first goal in the net on a direct kick from Paul Krueger, and John Ohan booted an unassisted goal by Malcolm Schick at 30:00.

"Rhinebeck is a fast team and it uses its speed to the best advantage," said Chiasson. "They were just able to beat us to every ball in the second half."

Chiasson had praise for his goalkeeper Malcolm Schick "who made some good saves in the second half before he was scored upon." He also commended Mike Prendergast at center fullback who did a "credible job for Jim Brown who was out for the game." Especially impressive for Kingston was Jimmy Carroll on defense, who was assigned to guard against Ohan, who Chiasson feels is one of the finest linemen in the league.

Kingston now posts a 10-5-1 record for the season and returns to action on Saturday at 1 p.m. for a home game against Saugerties. Last time the two teams met, Kingston prevailed 2-0.

Isles Drew Blood, Canadiens Won the Battle

MONTREAL (UPI) — The New York Islanders drew first blood, but the Montreal Canadiens won the battle.

Larry Robinson and Jacques Lemaire scored first period power play goals as the Canadiens defeated the Islanders 4-1 in the only game in the National Hockey League Monday night.

The victory gave the defending Stanley Cup champion Canadiens a 9-2 record for a league-leading 18 points. It was only the second loss of the year for the Islanders, now 6-2-1 with 13 points.

The game was tied 1-1 when Bob Bourne took a minor penalty at 15:38 of the opening period. Just 29 seconds later, Gerry Hart high-sticked Peter

Mahovlich, and took a five-minute major for drawing blood.

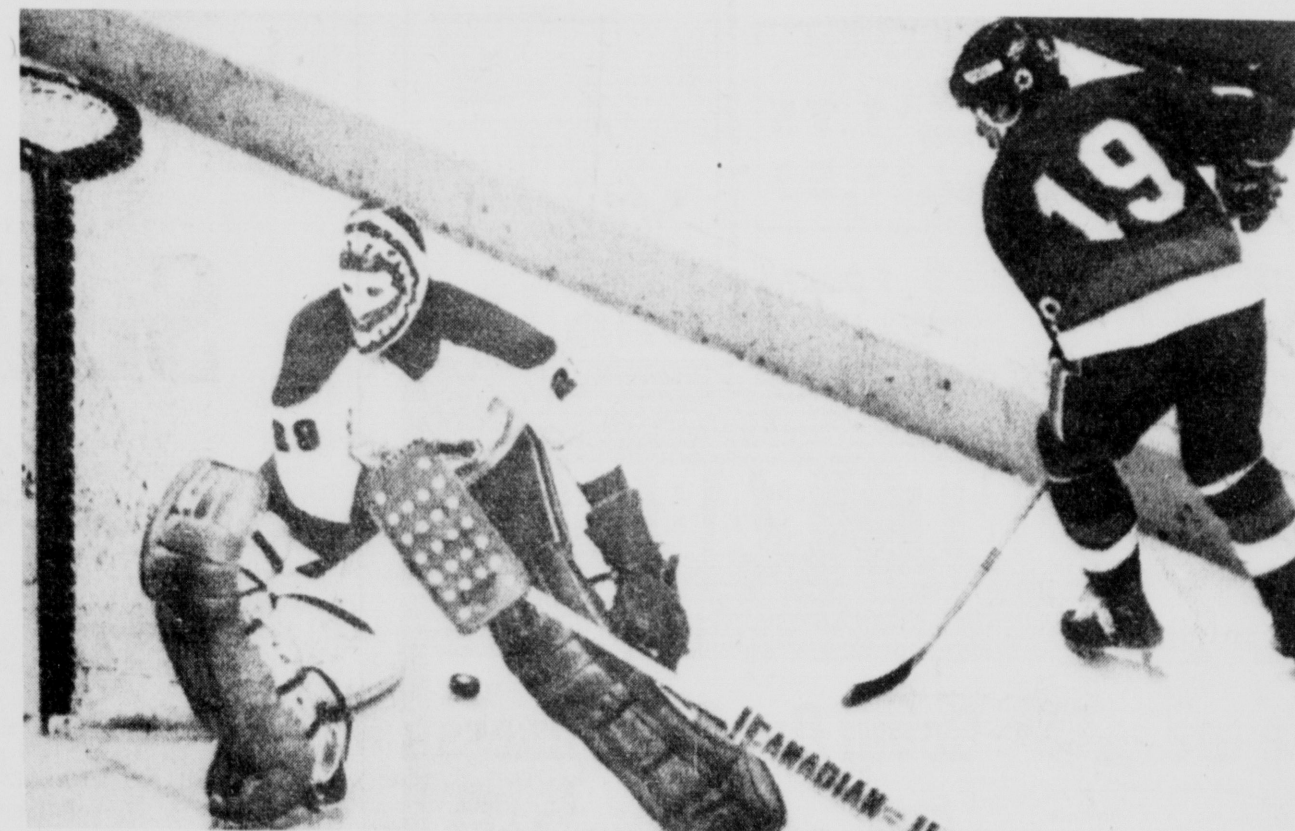

"I guess you have to say that was the turning point of the game," said Mahovlich. "Hart didn't mean anything. It was accidental. He was trying to lift up my stick and he got me on the bridge of the nose. Sure he drew blood, at first the referee didn't see it and I had to come out of the dressing room to show it to him, the referee had to follow the rules and we took advantage of it."

With a two-man advantage, Robinson capped the Montreal power play with a 60-foot goal. "We had to wait for our chances," said Robinson. "I knew we were bound to get an opening somehow, because we were passing the puck all over the place and they only had three players out there in front of Billy Smith."

With Hart still in the penalty box, Lemaire scored two minutes after Robinson by deflecting a Guy Lapointe shot past Smith. Doug Jarvis' second period goal gave Montreal a 4-1 lead.

Denis Potvin's first shot of the game against Montreal goalie Ken Dryden at 7:11 of the first period gave New York a short-lived 1-0 lead. Mario Tremblay tied it a minute later with a 40-foot drive.

"We played a good defensive game," said Montreal coach Scotty Bowman. "I figure that the Islanders will be one of the teams that we'll have to beat this year. They'll probably battle us right down to the wire for the most total points."

Boone Over Bench on UPI Stars

NEW YORK (UPI) — Catcher Bob Boone of the Philadelphia Phillies is a surprise choice on a 1976 UPI National League All-Star team dominated by six members of the two-time world champion Cincinnati Reds.

The 28-year old Boone, in his sixth season with the Phillies, beat out perennial NL All-Star catcher Johnny Bench of the Reds with 11 votes compared to eight for the Cincinnati star in balloting by a panel of 27 UPI baseball correspondents around the country.

Second baseman Joe Morgan of the Reds was the only unanimous choice but was joined by five other members of the world champions.

Cincinnati stars named along with Morgan were shortstop Dave Concepcion, third baseman Pete Rose, outfielders George Foster and Ken Griffey and relief pitcher Rawly Eastwick.

Also elected to the team were first baseman Steve Garvey of the Los Angeles Dodgers, outfielder Garry Maddox of the Phillies and pitchers Randy Jones of the San Diego Padres and Jerry Koosman of the New York Mets.

The closest vote was at third base where Rose beat out two-time NL batting champion Bill Madlock of the Chicago Cubs 11-9. Eastwick won out over Butch Metzger of the Padres 13-9 for the relief pitcher in another close vote.

The voting by positions:
Catcher: Bob Boone, Philadelphia (11); Johnny Bench, Cincinnati (8); Ted Simmons, St. Louis (5); Jerry Grote, New York (3).

First base: Steve Garvey, Los Angeles (16); Bob Watson, Houston (7); Willie Montanez, San Francisco (4).

Second base: Joe Morgan, Cincinnati (27); Shortstop: Dave Concepcion, Cincinnati (18); Bill Russell, Los Angeles (6); Larry Bowa, Philadelphia (3).

Third base: Pete Rose, Cincinnati (11); Bill Madlock, Chicago (9); Mike Schmidt, Philadelphia (7).
Outfielders: George Foster, Cincinnati (25); Garry Maddox, Philadelphia (15); Ken Griffey, Cincinnati (12); Greg Luzinski, Philadelphia (8); Dave Kingman, New York (6); Al Oliver, Pittsburgh (4); Dave Parker, Pittsburgh (3); Cesar Cedeno, Houston (2); Jim Wynn, Atlanta, Rick Monday, Chicago, Cesar Geronimo, Cincinnati, Bob Watson, Houston, Jay Johnstone, Philadelphia, and Pete Rose, Cincinnati (1 each).

Starting pitchers: Randy Jones, San Diego (22); Jerry Koosman, New York (21); Steve Carlton, Philadelphia (4); Tom Seaver, New York, and Don Sutton, Los Angeles (3 each); Butch Metzger, San Diego (1).
Relief pitcher: Rawly Eastwick, Cincinnati (13); Butch Metzger, San Diego (9); Skip Lockwood, New York (3); Ron Reed, Philadelphia, and Ken Forsch, Houston (1 each).

SPORT PARADE

Milton Richman,
UPI Sports Editor

NEW YORK (UPI) — For a few minutes there, he was like a guy who had suddenly gotten hot at the dice table. He had clicked on four passes in a row, two for six yards apiece, another for eight yards and the last one for 24.

Joe Namath, the Old Master, was showing 'em he hadn't lost his touch.

He blew on his hands, looking over the heads of his teammates in the huddle across the line to check the Baltimore Colts' defense.

Then he lowered his own head and called the play, another pass.

Trailing 13-0 with little more than a minute remaining in the second quarter, the New York Jets came out of their huddle briskly and lined up quickly. It was second and goal to go on the Colts' three yard line and the Jets were all pumped up, feeling they were going good now and were a cinch to score.

Namath took the ball from center. He had plenty of time. No trouble at all spotting his man, tight end Richard Osborne, who had run a criss-cross pattern in the end zone. He let the ball go. What Namath didn't see was Jackie Wallace, the Baltimore safety man, trailing only a few steps behind Osborne, stalking him hungrily, the same way the Wolf did Little Red Riding Hood.

Wallace rushed in front of Osborne and picked off the pass, then started out of the end zone down the field the other way not far from the sideline. He crossed over the goal line, the 5, 10, 15, 20, and 25, outdistancing all but a couple of Jets' defenders, who finally forced him out of bounds on Baltimore's 29.

Hobbling along the best he was able with a pulled hamstring in one leg and a brace on the other was Joe Namath.

He actually was trying to catch the fleeing Wallace, and tackle him. Every bone in his body seemed to be protesting and he couldn't run without limping, but the Jets' quarterback was giving it everything he had in him, certainly not short-legging it.

Namath made a rather sad figure chasing Wallace, especially on those two bum wheels of his. He looked even more forlorn later when he had to be helped back up on his feet and leave the field after being hit on the head by Fred Cook, Baltimore's 6-foot-4, 247-pound defensive end, whose specialty is sacking quarterbacks.

Namath was trying to get off a pass to Lou Piccone early in the final quarter when Cook flattened him. He didn't move for some time and all he did was lie there on the damp, cold turf in Shea Stadium. Seeing him motionless, with his head to one side, the crowd suddenly grew silent as if anticipating the worst. But after being ministered to by trainer Jeff Sneiderker, Namath was able to get up and walk off under his own power.

He had blacked out without realizing it, he said later in the Jets' quarters after the Colts had taken them apart, 20-0.

"I thought to myself he (Sneiderker) must be some kind of track star by the way he got there to me so quickly," said Namath. "I guess I must have blacked out, but didn't realize it. I saw a flash, I felt pain and then I went limp. I felt like I was floating. It was what I call a 'double-bubble' head shot. And I had a man out in the open, too."

Believe it or not, that bothered Namath most of all.

Until someone came over and asked him about some of the stories lately. Stories to the effect some people feel at 33 he's too old to revive the Jets any more, stories which said he has lost his passing touch and that with his physical infirmities on top of it, he was over the hill, all through.

"I feel great," Joe Namath protested. He looked good, too, even though this was only a half hour after he had his bell rung and was forced to leave the ball game.

"I'm sorry people feel 33 is old," he said. "I'm sorry for them. Myself, I feel terrific. People are entitled to their opinion. If that's the way they feel, God Bless them. As for me being washed up, people don't see films. They don't know what's really happening. I'm judged by my peers, the guys I play with day in and day out.

"Look, I don't care what anybody says, no one's gonna shake my confidence. I'm gonna go out there and try to do my best everytime."

The fact is Joe Namath can still whip the ball but he has to have some help. From his offensive line and from his backs, who have to establish some kind of running game to make Namath's passing effective at all. Al Ward, the Jets' general manager, and Lou Holtz, the new coach, are rebuilding the club the right way. They even have a quarterback in the wings, Richard Todd, for the time Namath is through.

He isn't yet, though. No quarterback reads defenses better and no quarterback is as good as he is calling plays. When it comes to throwing the ball, Joe Namath still can do that with anyone else. In that regard, Baltimore's Bert Jones has emerged as the best in the league, yet the curious thing about that is how he kept his eyes riveted to Namath all during Sunday's contest.

"I watch him more than I do anybody else," said Jones after the game. "The reason I do that is because he's the best."

Mrs. Babe Ruth Dead at 76

NEW YORK (UPI) — Mrs. Babe Ruth, widow of the late New York Yankees' home run king and baseball's unofficial "first lady," died Monday of cancer at the age of 76.

Until her death, Mrs. Ruth carried on her husband's quest to help baseball maintain its image as the national pastime. For many years, she was a regular at oldtimers' games and frequently attended Yankees and Mets games.

Shortly after her husband's death in 1948, also from cancer, Mrs. Ruth became instrumental in developing baseball skills among teenage boys by fully supporting Babe Ruth baseball, a national program that has produced many major league stars.

A model and chorus girl born Claire Merritt, Mrs. Ruth was introduced to the Yankees' slugger by actor James Barton. After a long courtship, they were married in 1929, according to Allan Schneider, a family friend. It was the second marriage for both.

Baseball was nothing new to Mrs. Ruth, however. Her father was Ty Cobb's attorney and her cousin was Johnny Mize. Their marriage lent credence to the theory that behind every great man there is a great woman.

Mrs. Ruth was given much of the credit for Ruth's ability to remain a star until his retirement at 40 in 1935. Though he was famous for his continued disregard of training rules, Mrs. Ruth kept her husband's love for the game intense.

"She was a real fan. She

used to give advice to players," Schneider said. "When (Met pitcher) Tom Seaver just missed getting a no-hitter a couple of years ago she told Seaver some things. She would write letters of encouragement and advice to players, not just the stars but the others too."

In addition to keeping up with baseball, Mrs. Ruth had a lively interest in politics. She worked actively in President Dwight D. Eisenhower's 1952 campaign and was a long time friend of James Farley, the New York Democratic kingpin, and of Thomas Dewey, the unsuccessful Republican candidate for president against Harry S. Truman in 1948.

Mrs. Ruth also was active in the American Cancer Society, and the family requested that donations be made to the society in her memory in lieu of flowers.

Colgate Women Win

WAPPINGERS—Colgate University captured the finals in both the singles and doubles and the overall team title Sunday in the New York State Women's Collegiate Tennis Tournament.

Anne Arnes of Colgate defeated Tracy Powell, also of Colgate, 6-1, 6-2 in the singles final, and the Colgate team of Jean Gangler and Amy Lockwood defeated the duo of Francis Gross and Sahla Dutton, 6-4, 6-1 for the doubles title. Colgate's 22 points led all other squads.

The matches were conducted at Cross Court's indoor facilities here due to rain. They were moved from the site of early round play, the new Paltz State campus.

Perry 'Roast' Planned

STONE RIDGE — Ulster County Community College's Alumni Association will sponsor a "roast" of basketball coach Mike Perry Nov. 10 at Williams Lake Hotel.

Perry is marking his 10th anniversary as UCCS cage coach. He is five wins away from the 200 mark for his career.

Mrs. Mary Ann Parker, Alumni Association president, said the "roast," was planned because "Mike Perry is so well known in the community. We're expecting a good turnout for it."

Tickets for the event will be $10 per person. A cocktail hour at 6:30 p.m. will precede the dinner. Tickets are available at Kaye Sports, Wall St., Kingston; Spada Sports Shop, Broadway, Kingston; Mammoth Mart sporting goods department, Mammoth Mall, Kingston; Smith Hardware, Saugerties; and the Development Office at UCCS.

Ranger Rookie Explodes

NEW YORK (UPI) — The anxieties were building up inside Nick Fotiu and he just had to let loose his frustrations.

So when the final buzzer sounded in the New York Rangers' 5-4 loss to the Vancouver Canucks Sunday night, the rookie winger, who played two shifts the entire game, raced across the ice and attempted to climb over the boards and into the stands to fight with a fan who had been berating the team throughout the evening.

"I didn't think people could be so cruel," Fotiu said after several teammates pulled him off the boards and into the locker room. "They're not fans. I don't understand how they can boo us one minute and cheer us when we score a goal. It's hypocritical. Some of the language was unbelievable. I wouldn't want to bring a kid with me to the game."

One time, not too long ago, the 24-year-old Fotiu, a local native from Staten Island, was a member of the very same traditionally-hostile New York crowd.

"I fought with them when I was in the stands and they booed," he said, "and I'll fight with them when I'm on the ice, too. It's supposed to be one big family — fans, players and management. If they don't like what's going on on the ice, maybe they should go and see the Islanders. If they're not gonna help us out, why sit in the stands?"

That, obviously, is something Fotiu can relate to.

With a reputation as a policeman, the World Hockey Association referee has failed to score a goal and notched only one assist while sitting out two of the Rangers' nine games.

But Sunday night, when Coach John Ferguson elected to pull his goaltender, Gilles Gratton, and use six skaters in the closing minute, Fotiu was sent on the ice.

"I'd like to play more but I guess I have a lotta faith in the coach," Fotiu said. "I'll have plenty of opportunities."

In his one opportunity Sunday, Fotiu proved he could produce, playing aggressively and being instrumental in the Rangers coming up with at least four "near" goals in the last minute. When the buzzer sounded, and that one fan called him a "goon," it was time for Fotiu to explode.

"We're having a tough enough time winning without the fans booing," he said. "When you're sitting down there on the ice, you hear everything, it echoes. They started cursing me out. What do you want me to do? Stand there and take it?"

Five Teams in Two Seasons

Moses Lands in Houston

HOUSTON (UPI) — The Houston Rockets paid a steep price for Moses Malone, but general manager Ray Patterson says the former ABA all-star was worth it.

The Rockets Monday traded their first-round draft pick for the next two years to the Buffalo Braves for the 6-foot-11 center.

"The future is now," Patterson said. "We feel the addition of Malone can make us an instant contender for our division title."

Malone was unavailable for comment Monday night. He was scheduled to practice with the Rockets today and hold a news conference afterwards.

A Buffalo spokesman said the Rockets also paid $100,000, but Patterson refused to confirm the figure.

The trade reunites the 22-year-old Malone with his first pro coach—Tom Nissalke. Malone played for Nissalke with the Utah Stars in 1974-75, easing the teenager's highly-publicized jump from a Petersburg, Va., high school to pro ball.

"I saw enough of him in 1975 to know that if I ever got another chance, I would go after him," Nissalke said, who expects Malone to be ready to play against the Philadelphia 76ers Wednesday night.

"Malone is one of the game's premiere defensive players and shot-blockers and he will tremendously bolster our defense," Patterson said. "His addition gives Tom a great deal of flexibility in using smaller players at the guard and forward positions."

The Rockets, 40-42 last season with seven-foot Kevin Kunnert at center, had acquired 6-10 Tom Owens to start this season. But the front line was still considered thin. Buffalo had acquired Malone from the Portland Trail Blazers one week ago but played only six minutes in the first two games.

"He apparently hasn't played because they didn't need him," a Rockets spokesman said.

Houston was Malone's fifth pro basketball home in two seasons. After the Utah Stars of the ABA folded early in Malone's second season (1975-76), he went to St. Louis. And when the ABA merged into the NBA, Portland selected him in the August dispersal draft.

He was chosen as an all-star in his two ABA seasons despite starting the 1975-76 season in Utah with a severely sprained ankle.

Go-Go Girls Got-Got

UTICA, N.Y. (UPI) — Officials in Oneida County were looking to add eight more suspects to a group of 13 "go-go" dancers who have been arrested on welfare fraud and larceny charges.

The dancers were arrested over the weekend in what officials said was the largest raid of its kind in New York State.

Sealed indictments handed down by a grand jury Friday named 21 women, all from Oneida County night clubs. Officials said Monday the scheme involved at least $15,000 in welfare assistance payments over a three-year period.

Oneida County District Attorney Richard Enders said the $15,000 figure might go higher, since "many of the club owners kept slipshod financial records".

Sheriff's deputies said a tip launched their investigation into the welfare scheme. The 13 dancers arrested by Monday, mainly in their 20s, were in Oneida County Jail awaiting arraignment.

Do Clothes Make the Man?

LAWTON, Okla. (UPI) — Men who wear their shirts open may be in style, but their appearance might make them less liked, according to a study by a psychologist at a state mental health center.

Louis Scott Williamson, 32, conducted the study while working on his master's degree in psychology at the University of Missouri at Kansas City.

He found that persons wearing clothing considered sexually suggestive generally did not get high marks for being physically attractive or liked.

Williamson, now a staff psychologist at Lawton's Jim Taliaferro Mental Health Center, showed 40 students photographs of men and women models wearing different types of clothes.

They compared two photographs for each of 12 clothing styles for men and women. They rated the models on physical attractiveness, sexual suggestibility and likability.

For men the comparisons involved a baggy versus tight swim suit, baggy vs. tight pants, shirt vs. no shirt, baggy vs. tight shirt and regular vs. unbuttoned shirt.

For women the comparisons involved bra or no bra, regular vs. unbuttoned shirt, regular vs. a tied-up shirt exposing the stomach, regular or short shorts, regular vs. short skirt and a tied-up shirt vs. a bikini. Men models were rated as significantly more likable when they wore tight pants, the study showed. Men found women models more likable when they wore shorter garments and women found them more likable when they wore short shorts as compared to longer shorts.

Otherwise, the participants felt those wearing sexually suggestive clothing generally were less likable.

"It is rather interesting that men would find the women less likable with a completely unbuttoned shirt than when wearing a buttoned shirt," Williamson said. "Perhaps this deems the woman as being too threatening to the man."

Women gave "very strong negative results" to women models in unbuttoned shirts, no bras, bikinis and other sexually suggestive clothing, except for short shorts, he said. However, men did not show such strong negative feelings about men models wearing sexually suggestive clothing, he said.

The reason for such a difference is unknown, he said.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

WEDNESDAY, OCT. 27

Your Birthday Today: Practical reorganization highlights your year as you switch habits and methods in search of better ways for daily living. Favorable changes in work come freely in response to your improving attitude, initiative. Be willing to assume more responsibility. Relationships go well if you let matters take their course. Today's natives promote what they believe in, know what they want to do. Those born this year will develop new technical systems to channel subtle natural forces into constructive tangibles.

Aries (March 21-April 19): Subjective experience seems like a foray into unfamiliar areas, with surprising insights. Career comes to important decisions as you assume more obligations.

Taurus (April 20-May 20): Impulse overruns your capacity to produce. Don't promise too much. A pause for second thoughts is worth the embarrassment of delay. Reorganize resources.

Gemini (May 21-June 20): During this calm week of tentative, exploratory progress, don't waste time with expensive hobbies. Give full consideration to conflicting lines of action.

Cancer (June 21-July 22): Friends urge you beyond what you can cope with. Speculative come-ons abound. Control the situation by being very explicit when you say yes or no.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22): More work arrives than you're set to handle, and there is little option about how you do it. Don't try passing the buck; it upsets future help that you need.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Do not extend or waive past agreements. People must share duties if they want reward. Don't let friendship blur your view of what's happening.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Influences that provoke changes at business and home effect results that open the way for bigger moves. Family chats resolve dilemmas despite bickering.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Caprice rules decisions, only slightly modified by late information. Be easy on partners, firm against competitors. Revise tactics as you trigger reactions.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Don't fall for either hard or soft sell. No bargains survive the test of practical usage now. You've been penny-wise so far; hang in there a bit longer.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Your persuasive ability is at a high. Look into unfamiliar ideas; make trial runs. Family imbroglios stir pros and cons; get the entire story first.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You've made progress on matters other people haven't even considered. Present your suggestions in a favorable light. They may get a better reception.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20): Friends offer conflicting opinions. Follow your intuition where cash is involved. Some instability is quietly corrected as a long-missing factor turns up.

TEEN FORUM

By JEAN ADAMS, Ph.D.

GOSSIP: (Q) I live in a rural community where people spread gossip faster than the speed of sound. Recently, a 16-year-old girl from Tennessee was visiting one of her friends who lives just down the road from me. So being nice, I had sort of a welcoming party for her.

Everyone enjoyed it, but rumors spread that we were girl friend and boy friend.

She has left now and I write her occasionally. But the rumors (which are not true) still persist and are causing tension. What should I do? — Talked About in Oklahoma.

(A) In the country or in the city, gossipers are fore-er groping around for something to talk about. If there isn't anything, they invent something.

The best way to cope with this is to spread the truth around. When these people say things about you that aren't true, tell them what the truth is.

And make it a special point to tell any local girl or girls you may be interested in what the truth is. If you don't, your silence may be accepted as confirmation, and the untrue rumors may be accepted as fact.

BOSSINESS: (Q) I have a girl friend who thinks she owns me. She'll listen to everything I tell her, but when I go around another girl, she gets angry and jealous. — Prisoner in New Jersey.

(A) A girl who permits her boy friend no freedom to talk with or be friendly with other girls is taking a big chance of losing him. Most boys don't like to be led around by the nose.

Your girl friend, in the way she treats you, is betraying insecurity through her bossiness. She is afraid that she will lose you if she doesn't watch you every minute.

On the other hand, the way you treat her isn't exactly ideal. If you expect her to take orders from you and do everything you tell her to do, you should not resent possessiveness on her part.

Both of you would be better off if you would show some mutual respect and trust.

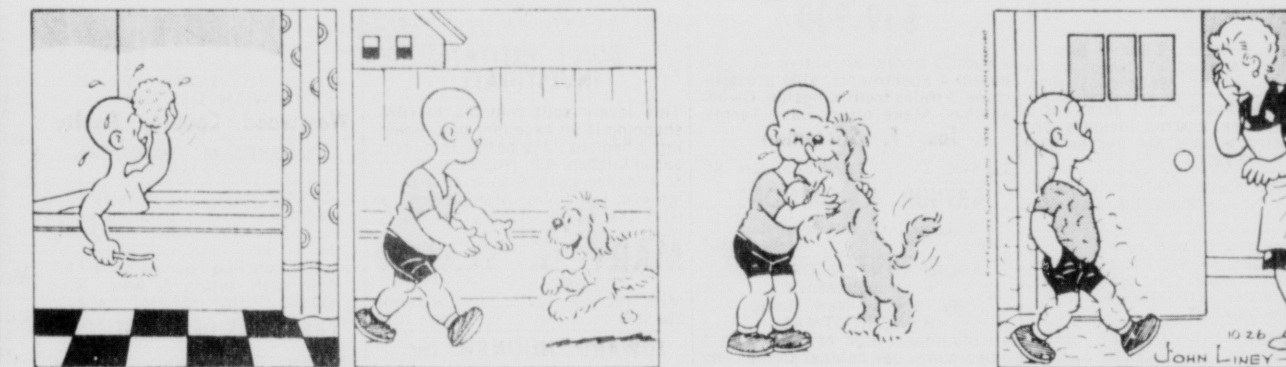

(Have a problem? Write to Dr. Jean Adams, care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 2402, Houston, Texas 77001. Every letter is read, but because of the great number received, Dr. Adams cannot send personal replies.)

East won the first trick with the jack of hearts and returned the queen. South held off again but had to win the third heart.

When South gave up a diamond trick, East knocked out the king of spades. When South gave up a club trick, East knocked out the ace of spades. Then South took the rest, making his contract.

All very sad for the defenders, and we can understand why East called his partner a lemming. (At least it sounded that way.)

SHOULD SWITCH
When South refuses the second heart trick, West should see the futility of continuing the suit. After establishing the hearts he can never regain the lead to cash his good tricks. West should overtake the second trick with the king of hearts in order to switch to something more useful.

The jack of spades looks promising. If West switches to spades after winning the second heart, South goes down. West knocks out the king of spades before South has tackled either of the minor suits.

East gets in with the ace of diamonds to knock out the ace of spades. Then East is ready to defeat the contract with two spade tricks when he gets in with the queen of clubs.

INDEPENDENCE

Tiny Territory Becomes Youngest S. African State

UMTATA, Transkei(UPI) — The Transkei, a Denmark-sized territory carved out of South Africa as part of its apartheid policy, became Africa's youngest independent black state today, but without the recognition of the rest of the world.

In a midnight ceremony, a 101-gun salute boomed across the Transkei's green hills and valleys along South Africa's southeastern coastline. Church bells rang out and Xhosa tribesmen lit festive, hilltop fires.

The South African flag was lowered for the last time and the reddish brown, white and green banner of Transkei was hoisted in its place while the military band played the new national anthem, "Nkosi Sikeleli Afrika (God Bless Africa)".

The ceremony drew about 35,000 cheering spectators, but the official representative of only one other nation attended — South African state president Dr. Nicolaas Diederichs.

The United Nations and the Organization of African Unity have called Transkei a "product of apartheid" and cited its economic dependence on South Africa in refusing to recognize the new state.

In the past 13 years, South Africa has spent $690 million to develop the region. But economists say that without such recognition the Transkei will not gain the foreign investment needed to develop its fertile agricultural lands.

CHIEF MINISTER KAISER D. Matanzima, left, accepts copy of the status of the Transkei Act from South African State President Nicolaas Diederichs during today's ceremony in Umtata, Transkei, at which the Denmark-sized black homeland was declared an independent state.

The Transkei, with a population of two million, is the first of nine tribal homelands slated to gain independence as part of South Africa's territorial apartheid policy.

The plan ties the political rights of South Africa's 18 million blacks to their separate homelands occupying 13.7 per cent of the country's land area.

South Africa maintains that all blacks of Transkei descent — living anywhere in South Africa — lost their citizenship at midnight and automatically became Transkeians.

An estimated 10,000 blacks fled the territory for South Africa shortly before independence, saying they felt there was no future for them in the Transkei.

The formal instruments of independence were accepted by Chief Kaiser Matanzima, 61, the nation's new prime minister.

In a 10-minute speech, Matanzima warned white South Africa to speed up racial reforms and said his country will be nonracial.

But government officials said earlier some of the apartheid laws — including bans on interracial marriage and sexual relations — will remain on the statute books, at least for now.

The international rejection of the Transkei was underlined by U.N. Secretary General Kurt Waldheim who said in New York Monday "the only viable solution is to turn away from the policy of apartheid."

Police Still Seeking Arsonist

NEW YORK(UPI) — Police say they have no firm idea of who set a blaze that killed 25 persons in a Bronx social club during the weekend, though they are questioning scores of witnesses, survivors and relatives of the dead.

The interrogations began even before the medical examiner's office had positively identified all of the victims.

Homicide detectives said Monday they would visit the 16 persons hospitalized with burns and broken bones suffered when they jumped from a second story window to the street below to escape the flames.

In addition, other detectives planned to interview dozens of local residents who watched while firemen, after extinguishing the blaze, lowered the bodies of the victims in pine boxes in the early morning hours Sunday.

"All of the survivors have to be interviewed," a spokesman for District Attorney Mario Merola said. "We have to talk to all of the relatives of those who were killed in the fire."

"We have to look into the background of the social club to determine if anyone might have had a reason for burning it down. And, of course, we can't discount the possibility that the person who did it was just a plain nut."

Authorities appeared to be playing down reports that the fire was caused by a man ejected from the club after a dance-floor squabble with his wife.

"He, along with everyone else, is a suspect," said Merola's spokesman. "But he is no more of a suspect than anyone else. Everyone keeps trying to push the investigation in his direction, but there are literally scores of interviews that have to be conducted and dozens of possibilities explored."

Witnesses reported hearing the man shout, "There won't be no more arguments here," as he was taken from the club.

An hour later, a man tossed a firebomb through the street door of the club. Fire leaped up the stairway, blocking the exit with a wall of flames.

Police said the ejected patron's wife was killed in the fire.

State Takeover Would Mean Sales, Income Hikes Welfare Pickup Hi Taxes

WATKINS GLEN, N.Y. (UPI) — It would take a sales tax boost of three cents or a 41 per cent income tax hike for the state to be able to afford to take over local welfare costs, the chairman of the Senate Social Services Committee says.

"Upstaters should think twice before asking New York State to pick up local welfare costs," Sen. William Smith, R-Big Flats, said Monday.

In a speech on welfare reform, Smith said a state takeover would mean residents of counties outside of New York City "would have to come up with more than $500 million in new state revenues" to pay for New York City's welfare budget.

Currently, the expense of most welfare programs are borne 50 per cent by the federal government and 25 per cent each by the state and county.

He said since the city "has 68 per cent of the statewide welfare caseload and contributes approximately 40 per cent of state revenues," to shift all of the non-federal share to the state would mean a greater savings for New York City than for other counties.

A shift from local property taxes as the source of the welfare funds would reduce property taxes upstate by $469.8 million while land taxes in New York City would decline by $1.2 billion, Smith told local government representatives attending a seminar by the State Association of Counties.

The state would have to raise an additional $1.62 billion to take over the local costs, he said.

"If an increase in the state sales tax was chosen, from 4 to 7 per cent, it would cost upstate taxpayers an added $507 million and save New York City taxpayers $509 million," Smith said.

"If the state's personal income tax was raised, a required increase of 41 per cent,"
